Ban Sale of Timber Land Pearse Report Tells Gov't

By AL FORREST and LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has been asked to ban further sales of public timber land to private interests.

A recommendation of this effect is contained in the massive Pearse report on the B.C. forest industry which was released today.

The report, containing hundreds of recommendations which, if implemented, could drastically change the face of forestry in the province, also urges:

The industry be opened up to allow outside firms to participate.

A government declaration that limber licences issued before 1958 in perpetuity are not in fact perpetual leases.

The report was prepared by Peter Pearse, who was named in July, 1975 as head of a royal commission to investigate forest resources.

It recommends a streamlining of the present complicated timber licensing system and that the accent be on short-term rather than long-term tenure for forest firms.

The basic contract would be for a 10-year term, which could be renegotiated by the government and the company after five years. In the case of a company just starting out, a 15-year term could be granted.

The report was released without comment today by Forest Minister Tom Waterland.

The report is the first extensive review of the industry in more than 20 years and will likely form the basis for change in provincial government policy affecting forestry for years to come.

The two-volume report recommends significant reforms in timber tenure policies, legislation affecting the industry, public participation in forest planning and also takes a look at such areas as foreign ownership of B.C.'s major resource and the use of crown forest land for recreation.

Pearse, a University of B.C. professor of economics, and a one-man commission, took his travelling road show all over B.C. for more than five months in 1975, hearing hours of submissions from industry officials, government planners and environmental groups. He accepted 186 briefs and presented his final report to the provincial government in October, 1976.

Pearse said a key recommendation is for a forest licence for 10 years only. And it could be re-opened by the government after five years and new terms negotiated.

When a licence expries, any company may bid on it. If the holder of the licence is outbid, the company would be given an opportunity to make a matching bid. If the company did not wish to bid that high, the licence would pass to the new company.

This would give the provincial government a maximum amount of control over the licencing process and would enable smaller companies to have access to timber if they wished to bid for it.

There should be no bidding fees as these only serve to penalize smaller companies that may wish to enter the bidding.

While the recommendations

HOLIDAY CUT: $500 DAMAGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air Tuesday was ordered to pay $500 damages to a Maple Ridge woman whose family missed a Hawaii-bound plane last Christmas because the airline had oversold the flight.

Small claims court Judge Nick Mussalem awarded the damages and $28 costs to Mrs. Dutchie Mathison.

Mrs. Mathison, her husband Thomas and two children arrived at the CP Air counter last December to catch the flight they had confirmed 11 months previously — and which CPAir had re-confirmed on Dec. 4.

"They told us (on Dec. 4) to be sure to enjoy flying CP Air," Mrs. Mathison said Tuesday.

"We waited in line and we were about 10 away from the waiting room when they announced that was all they could take. They said they were overbooked and we might as well go home and forget it — a holiday we had planned for more than a year."

Mrs. Mathison said she refused to leave and told airline workers she'd stay there until they got her another flight. CP Air later issued the family tickets for a Dec. 22 flight.

"So it ruined three days of our holiday," Mrs. Mathison said.

"And we had paid extra in the beginning to get on a weekend flight."

Mrs. Mathison said at least 50 others were turned back from the same flight "and the CP Air people just didn't care, all they were concerned with was telling us to keep back and get out of the way."

Fed to Fight Right to Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia labor leaders, suspicious of the provincial government's intentions, vowed unrelenting opposition Tuesday if Social Credit moves to introduce right-to-work legislation.

If such a bill is passed, workers "should go off their jobs and this province should be shut down tight until they back off," Gerry Stoney, president of the New Westminister Labor Council, said at the B.C. Federation of Labor annual convention.

Delegates passed a resolution opposing any attempt to bring in right-to-work laws, which "do not guarantee the right of every worker to a job, but instead attack the trade union movement and undermine the standard of living of all working people."

Stoney said the right-to-work laws would amount to "the right to work for less, the right to go and scab if there is a strike."

A vote on future federation policy, schedule Tuesday, was postponed until today. Delegates are being asked to choose between a hard-line policy recommended by the executive and a more moderate line aimed at improving labor's image in the province.

Observers see today's vote as an indicator of Friday's balloting when delegates will choose a secretary-treasurer between Art Kube, regional education officer of the Canadian Labor Congress and a moderate, and incumbent Len Guy.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett, meanwhile, urged trade unionists "to give up one week's beer money and join the NDP."

He told delegates that the labor movement as a whole and the New Democratic Party have always had differences "and we will continue to have those differences because the trade union movement and the party are not one and the same."

Barrett, former premier of B.C., said the NDP values the official affiliation of trade unions with his party but he also urged union members to join the party on an individual basis as full-fledged members.

"We need ideas and we need some changes in policy."

There were no recriminations in Barrett's speech to the federation, although some labor leaders said the executive council's hard-nosed criticism of the NDP when it was in power contributed to that party's defeat.

THOUSANDS MARCH IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Twenty-thousand trade unionists and Labor party workers marched up to the gates of Parliament tonight demanding that the Labor government avoid making cuts in public spending.

Police stood shoulder-to-shoulder outside Parliament as the demonstrators, led by nine left-wing Labor members of Parliament, came to a halt.

The demonstration was in opposition to the government's policy aimed at strengthening the pound.

Hussein Crushes Siege

Times News Services

AMMAN — King Hussein's shock troops crushed a four-hour siege today by gunmen in Amman's Intercontinental Hotel that took seven lives, a Jordanian spokesman said.

Three terrorists, two hotel employees and two soldiers were killed, the spokesman said. A fourth gunman was seriously wounded.

King Hussein personally ordered a final attack on the gunmen, who were holed up on the fourth floor of the hotel with an unknown number of hostages, the spokesman said.

"The king ordered that the operation be conducted with the minimum possible loss in lives, especially among the hotel guests."

None of the hotel guests was killed, the spokesman said.

The identity of the gunmen was not known. Some reports said they were Iranians and one may have been Japanese.

The four gunmen ran into the hotel lobby at 9:50 a.m. firing automatic weapons "to seize the hotel and hold guests hostage," Radio Amman said earlier.

Two cars were blown up during the first minutes of the attack.

The Sky Didn't Fall, Levesque Soothes

Times News Services

MONTREAL — "Many people realized this morning . . . that the sky has not fallen on our heads," Premier-elect Rene Levesque said Tuesday night, continuing to dispel fears about the consequences of his Parti Quebecois' overwhelming victory in the Quebec election.

See other Quebec stories, Page 9.

Reiterating his party's promise to hold a referendum within two years on the question of Quebec independence, Levesque said it was necessary to have a consensus on the question.

"If we don't have this consensus, we must respect the fact that we don't have it," he said in an interview on CBC's French-language television network.

"There is no possible ambiguity, it is a commitment and we will stick to it."

The PQ won 69 of 110 seat in the election, something Mr. Levesque described as a miracle since he expected to win a maximum of 40 ridings.

Levesque earlier said he expects to take over as Quebec premier in about 10 to 15 days and has placed priority on putting the province's financial and administrative situation on a sound basis.

Levesque told a news conference that he and Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa would meet Thursday to fix a date for change of government.

Levesque said he had had contacts with officials of the finance department, Hydro-Quebec and the Quebec Deposit and Investment Fund to discuss the province's capabilities.

INSURE NOW FOR DIVORCE?

WASHINGTON (WP) — A New York divorce lawyer says the time has come when married couples should take out divorce insurance the way they insure against fire, auto accidents and sickness.

The lawyer, Diana DuBroff, made the recommendation after seeing divorce rates soar and dealing with suffering parents and needy children in divorce cases.

"The broken home is as American as apple pie and motherhood," she wrote in the fall issue of The Barrister, a magazine published by the young lawyers section of the American Bar Association. "And those who suffer most are the children."

DuBroff's proposal, in which she calls a family security guarantee plan, would be designed chiefly to provide temporary child support—no more than one or two years' worth — giving the partners in the broken marriage a breathing period at a time of economic as well as emotional strain.

Such financial cushion, she said, "could insure our children from becoming public charges, save our employable divorcees from hasty remarriages and keep our middle-income marriage casualties from the poverty rolls.

"Further, it could protect our guilt-ridden fathers from avoiding the children because of delinquent payments. It could eliminate the family court support and non-support hostilities . . . It could even help the father who gets custody of the children and must provide household care while he works."

She raised the question of whether divorce insurance would subsidize divorce contrary to public policy. "We're all paying for the children of divorce" as it is, she said, as society picks up the tab for deadbeat fathers.

Would it encourage divorce? When health insurance began, some believed that it was inviting illness, she said.

Is such insurance marketable? "Actuarial studies have not yet been completed that could tell how much divorce insurance would actually cost," she conceded, so nobody knows. "It's now up to the actuaries, the insurance executives, the bankers and the far-sighted lawyers . . . to press for a workable plan."

BITE WORSE THAN BARK

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — What would you do if your father-in-law said the main course was lamb, then told you after dinner it was dog?

What 26-year-old Amaro Maturano did, said the government news agency Telam, was threatened to kill everybody in the house and proceed to strangle 40 chickens, cut the throats of three mules and three cows, shoot six more mules dead, break 1,200 eggs ready for market and set the farmhouse and truck on fire.

Big Firm May Quit Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of Canada's largest telecommunications equipment manufacturer says his company may shift a major portion of its operations to the United States unless the business climate is improved here.

Robert Scrivener, chairman of Northern Telecom Ltd. — formerly Northern Electric — told the Senate foreign affairs committee Tuesday that lower labor costs, higher productivity and better support for costly research and development all serve to beckon the company across the border.

Northern Telecom is a subsidiary of the major supplier of equipment to Bell Canada. Bell Canada, through its subsidiaries, has a monopoly on more than two of every three telephones in Canada.

He told the committee that Northern Telecom is beginning to market highly-sophisticated digital switching equipment and to recover the more than $100 million invested in development costs, sales would have to be made beyond the Canadian market, now about 80 per cent of its $1 billion annual sales.

"When this new equipment gets in the marketplace, price is likely to be the final determinant in the decision to buy," he said. All excess manufacturing costs had to be trimmed and this would be difficult in Canada.

He conceded that the output per worker in Canada was good but said that higher equipment and capital costs and the high costs of new technology resulted in lower productivity rates.

The best way to lower this high cost of technology would be by providing more incentives for research and development.

He suggested these incentives should not take the form of outright grants, but should be tied to the tax system.

AFTER THE HUNT, THE HUNT BEGAN

Two men were to appear in provincial court today charged with theft after a Duncan hunter turned detective to recover his stolen game — a 230-pound deer carcass.

Colwood RCMP said Randy Neilson had been hunting in the B.C. interior and left the game on the roof rack of his car while he visited friends at Langford.

When he left to drive home the deer had gone, annoying Neilson to the point where he began an independent search.

Police said he located the deer in the back of a truck parked at a beer parlor, and identified it by means of a missing tooth.

The tooth had been removed by a game warden during a spot check for animal health at Cache Creek.

Gulf Islands Are Going to Canadians

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Nelson Paul Whittier and Joachim Fuerst Zu Furstenberg have much in common, although they live poles apart.

Both are extremely wealthy, highly successful businessmen. Whittier lives in Los Angeles. Furstenberg lives in Donaueschingen, West Germany.

Each also used to own an island in the lower part of the Gulf chain.

Whittier owned Goudge Island, a 36-acre paradise opposite Canoe Cove in North Saanich, while Furstenberg owned the 1,440-acre Moresby Island, the large island B.C. Ferries travellers see on the starboard side as ferries leave Swartz Bay.

Over the past 18 months both have sold their holdings to the same company, Chesham Investments Ltd., a firm incorporated in Calgary on Jan. 6, 1975, and listing among its principal offers J. Douglas Robinson and John Ellison, both of Bermuda.

Chesham has agreed to pay Furstenberg $1,212,500 in yearly instalments of $404,166, and Whittier $950,000 in yearly instalments of $144,043.

What's significant about the two deals is not only the amount of money involved but that the purchaser is a Canadian family.

John Yuil of the Vancouver real estate firm of MacCaulay, Nicolls and Maitland, who handled the sales, refers to the family as "one of Canada's wealthiest." He says Robinson and Ellison are more or less front men.

Yuil refuses to identify the family.

"They're super sensitive about publicity," he says. "They have a daughter attending school in eastern Canada and they are afraid if their name gets into print they may be subject to a kidnap attempt."

The purchase of the two islands is especially note-

SUFFOCATION CAUSE OF ELEVATOR DEATH

A boy trapped underneath an apartment elevator cage last week in Esquimalt died of suffication, a coroner's inquest was told Tuesday.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther testified Lorne Smith, 11, of 516 Constance was asphyxiated in a small space where he became lodged while climbing from under the cage at play.

The boy and two friends had been riding beneath the elevator in a new building at 1315 Esquimalt Road, controlling it themselves, until someone on another floor pressed the service button.

The Smith boy was in the act of climbing out of the shaft and was caught by the moving cage.

The inquest was told of steps taken to get the boy's body free by superintendent Donald Fisher of Montgomery Elevator Co. Provincial elevator inspector Andrew Davis said the equipment was in good condition.

The inquest was adjourned to Nov. 30.

MPs Mull PQ-Backing Grit's Fate

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MPs met today to discuss the fate of rebel backbencher Serge Joyal, 31-year-old Quebec MP for the Montreal riding of Maisonneuve-Rosemount who campaigned for victorious Parti Quebecois candidate Clement Richard in Monday's Quebec election.

Liberal sources confirmed that a number of government MPs are upset with Joyal's actions, and there was speculation that moves would be made to oust him from the party's 135-member Parliamentary caucus.

Strait Control Speedup Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Esquimalt-Saanich MP Donald Munro called on Transport Minister Otto Lang Tuesday to speed up negotiations with U.S. authorities to bring in compulsory control of shipping in the Strait of Juan de Fuca following two incidents of "wandering" tankers in the past two weeks.

The Conservative MP referred in the Commons to two incidents — one involving the White Peony, flying the Panamanian flag, and the other involving the Warbah, flying the Kuweiti flag — where tankers in the strait have been violating shipping lanes and risking accidents.

Munro said the tankers are "wandering about in the most dangerous fashion."

The minister stated that one of the vessels was under the control of the U.S. coast guard at the time, under the voluntary system in effect between the two countries. At present there is no obligation for shipping to put themselves under the control of either Canadian or American authorities in the strait.

However, Lang stated that this system will be replaced with a compulsory one as soon as discussions between the U.S. and Canada are completed.

"We look forward then to having one of the best possible systems of navigation," the minister said.

The Conservative MP said outside the House that Lang should speed up the negotiations with the American authorities to eliminate the danger of accidents and massive oil spills affecting B.C. beaches and fisheries.

HOLMES GETS ICBC POST

VACOUVER (CP) — The board of directors of the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia said Tuesday it has appointed T. E. Holmes as senior vice-president in charge of auto insurance.

Holmes, who set up the B.C. Automobile Insurance Company in 1972, was formerly general manager of the BCAA and its subsidiaries.

The Sky Didn't Fall, Says Soothing Levesque

His government would "get to the bottom" of the $1-billion Olympics deficit, although it would not hold a "large, spectacular inquiry," he added.

He said he would ask for a few days' delay in a finance ministers conference scheduled Nov. 29-30 in Ottawa. His finance minister would be appointed only a few days before then.

He adopted a restrained manner as he read a prepared statement, then answered questions, first in French, then in English, for more than an hour before about 150 reporters in the ballroom of a downtown hotel.

He indicated he would attend a constitutional conference in mid-December but added that "frankly, about the last of the worries of Quebecers is the constitution.

"It isn't one of the basic urgencies of the moment."

In Ottawa, federal finance Minister Donald Macdonald said he would consider postponing the finance ministers' conference if so requested by the newly-elected Quebec government.

"That would be a reasonable request," Macdonald said, considering the Levesque government will only have been in power a few days.

The finance minister said, however, there would be no other changes due to the federal approach — and none resulting from the fact that the new Quebec government has a separatist policy.

Also in Ottawa, Claude Wagner (PC—Ste. Hyacinthe) said excessive concentration of powers at the federal level were a major reason for the Quebec election results.

Wagner said he was "very happy that the people of Quebec had spoken for a change of government that was overdue."

He said he expected the Levesque government would be busy trying to administer and govern to the best of its ability, and that any referendum on the separation question would be quite some time down the road.

Meanwhile, in Winnipeg, Bryce Mackasey, former federal cabinet minister and one of the few Liberals to win on Monday sounded a warning against the PQ and its leader.

"He's a dangerous man, dedicated to independence, nothing more and nothing less," Mackasey said.

"Don't be taken in by his Gallic smile. . . . He stands for independence, nothing else."

Mackasey told a Liberal constituency meeting in the Winnipeg riding of Fort Rouge not to be taken in by Levesque who, he said, won the election "on deceit."

He said the promised referendum of independence is as dangerous as any other referendum because 80 per cent of them are successful.

BLAST KILLS TWO WORKERS

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Two workmen were killed and at least two others critically injured after an explosion and gas leak today at the digester building of the Scott Paper Co. pulp mill here.

Company officials said they could not tell immediately what caused the accident.

One fireman also was treated for gas inhalation.

Fumes from the leak could be smelled in a large part of the city.

the weather

Mild air swept across southwestern B.C. Tuesday evening resulting in record high temperatures for the day in many locations. A reading of 16 was recorded at both Abbotsford and Victoria for the maximum in the country. These balmy conditions will be replaced by cooler air as a cold front crosses the province today. A band of rain accompanies the front with showers lingering in its wake. Snowflurries are likely in the north. Drier conditions are expected on Thursday across southern B.C. but in the north another weather system will bring rain to the coast and snowflurries inland.

New Head of Schools Sizes Up the System

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The Greater Victoria School District has been given its first examination by its new superintendent, and apparently passed with flying colors.

Allan Stables of North Vancouver does not take up duties until Jan. 1, but for the past two weeks has been here on an orientation visit which included trips to 35 schools.

Although generally praising the system, Stables said he found some areas needing improvement, especially in communication between central office administrative staff and individual schools and teachers.

He heard many complaints about lack of communication, Stables told trustees at Monday's meeting, and promised to "seriously attack" the problem.

There is real concern among teachers and principals trying to know and understand the district's goals and priorities.

"If you have them, the people out there teaching don't know of them," Stables told trustees.

But for the most part, the North Vancouver assistant superintendent of schools was impressed with the district.

Stables said he has been in a lot of schools over the years as an administrator and consultant, but is particularly impressed by the primary grades here.

He observed a "very solid educational program" and was pleased to see the small classes. But he is concerned with the sacrifices principals make for those small classes — larger classes in the intermediate grades.

The number of parents working with teachers in the classroom, especially in the inner city area, is "really quite amazing," and substantially ahead of North Vancouver.

It is also apparent the district has a resonable attitude toward change, he added:

"The schools in this district are the cleanest, best-maintained that I know of, and I've travelled a lot. They're in top-notch daily condition."

Stables said it will be difficult for the district to close more schools as the enrolment drops because the schools are "close" to the community. He said this is a Victoria phenomenon. He is impressed in the way principals and staff adapt to the community — especially in the older schools.

Student Deadline

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African Justice Minister James Kruger has given black students who have fled the country one week to return. His ultimatum Monday follows reports that more than 600 students from the black township of Soweto have fled since the rioting which started there in June. Kruger did not say what would happen if the students fail to return.

Battle over 'Toughness'

This week representatives of the British Columbia Federation of Labor's affiliated unions have gathered in Vancouver for one of the Fed's most important conventions. For the first time in years, there is an open challenge to the elected leadership of the organization.

Secretary-treasurer Len Guy, a loud, tough and abrasive man who came out of the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union (the ITU is one of the oldest unions on the continent), is being challenged for his post by Art Kube, regional education director of the Canadian Labor Congress. Kube was the organizer of B.C.'s successful (from labor's point of view) showing on Oct. 14 — the highest percentage walkout in Canada.

The contest is attracting so much attention because of the deep split in labor's ranks it represents. Though not well-known Kube is no crank or outsider; he has a good chance of dumping Guy. He has the backing of the International Woodworkers of America (the Fed's largest affiliate), the B.C. Government Employees Union (in second place), and the United Steelworkers of America. There is a real and sharp divide evident in B.C. labor.

Realistically, though, management shouldn't rub its hands over the internal fight in B.C. labor. A divided labor movement may be weaker, but it is also unpredictable. And the factions may be prone to outbid each other, escalating the militancy. Witness the turmoil in the pulp and paper sector of the B.C. economy recently, as the Canadian union fought the international affiliate to represent pulp mill workers. The results were longer strikes, more expensive settlements and fragile contracts broken by frequent wildcats.

There surely are differences of policy between the mcumbent and the challenger, but these have been buried in a curious shadow-boxing minuet over "toughness." The cult of machismo thrives in the labor movement of B.C.; the Hemingway tough-guy hero is alive and well at the B.C. Fed.

Which is the centre of the opposition to Guy. His opponents say his us-against-the-world stance on every issue is counter-productive. It only antagonizes without accomplishing anything, except to unite labor unions in a frontier fortress mentality.

Kube campaigns by saying he's "tougher" than Guy. "I think I can be tougher with the employer at the bargaining table than Len," said Kube last week in one interview. His difference — and here's the emphasis on style again — is summed up in Kube's next sentence: "But toughness doesn't mean shouting and pounding the table."

But nobody should expect that Kube as secretary treasurer would be a Casper Milquetoast, either. His two main backers, IWA leader Jack Munro and BCGEU secretary John Fryer, are determined fighters, but they're not ones to tackle a brick wall head-on in the Len Guy manner. What counts to the membership of the two unions is that the method produce results on their pay cheques. And Munro's and Fryer's methods are abundantly successful.

What other union has come so far, so fast as the BCGEU without so much as a day on strike (excepting the wildcat ferry workers' walkout three years ago)? What other union was as smart as the IWA last year, when it saw the coming of controls and signed a generous contract at the eleventh hour, leaving the pulp sector stewing?

Kube won't be a pushover, but he probably will be easier for government and management to talk to. The trouble is, the legislative changes hinted at by the Social Credit administration — right to work laws, making it tougher to organize — would force even St. Peter as secretary-treasurer of the Fed into a hardline, militant posture.

And Guy will be sure to use the bogeyman effect to full use in looking for support among the delegates. Kube represents a modern, moderate face for organized labor; Guy is still on the barricades. Now some unionists will take this opinion as proof that the monopoly capitalist press wants a tame lackey at the B.C. Fed; it may be the kiss of death for Kube. But if labor in 1976 can't see that it's time to change, then the Fed is going to be refighting old battles with no public support or sympathy.

". . . all the guys are delighted that you've finally become a consenting adult . . ."

TOM WICKER

Call It a Peanut, Jimmy

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter says he wants to make the U.S. presidency "more democratic with a little 'd.'" Amen to that, but some of us would feel a little more hopeful about it if Carter hadn't been so obviously delighted by his first ride in a presidential jet.

Radio news reports had it that on boarding this flying palace for the first time, Carter observed: "This is the one I've been waiting for." That brings to mind an instructive anecdote from Dwight D. Eisenhower, a man who knew a perquisite when he had one.

After Richard Nixon's defeat by John Kennedy in 1960, Eisenhower recalled, as the outgoing president he was required to brief the president-elect on the inner workings of the White House. What seemed to impress "young Mr. Kennedy" most, the general wrote later, was when he reached under his desk, pressed a button and a helicopter landed on the South Lawn.

Soft Drink Chair

Ay, there's the rub! Which of us wouldn't relish a helicopter appearing from heaven at the touch of a button? Who wouldn't want his or her own Boeing 747 to fly the whole family from Americus to St. Simons Island in good old down home Georgia? If you were addicted to the stuff, wouldn't you, like Lydon B. Johnson, love to have an armchiar with a tap that produced a glass of Fresca on demand?

If any one of us had the chance at government expense to be protected by the Secret Service, spoiled by white-jacketed servants, confronted by a telephone in every bathroom, and ushered into every gathering by Hail to the Chief — not to mention having our office right in the house, thus eliminating the traffic and parking problems — would we voluntarily reject it?

Well, we shall see what we shall see in Jimmy Carter's case, but lots of us are rooting for more denim shirts, fewer neckties and maybe some softball on the old helicopter pad. Here are a few other modest suggestions to help Carter find that lower case "d" the presidency lost somewhere between Abe Lincoln and Richard Nixon:

• Walk to your inauguration ceremony. It's not all that far from the White House to the Capitol, and your publicity photos show you've got the boots for it. Thomas Jefferson hoofed it, you know, and you'd find lots of good ole boys along the way to chat with. You could even say in your speech — but keep it short — that you'd just dramatized the lack of decent public transportation in this country, as well as the need to save energy by cutting down the use of gas-guzzling autos to transport one or two people.

• Later on, give the commerical airlines a try. The rest of us characters that travel have to stand in line for lugguage and sit three abreast and that's really life with a little "d." You'd not only meet some interesting folks, you'd get an earful of what's really bothering them, just the way you say you did in your primary campaign. And you could tell congress you were doing your part to save fuel, which is more than congress does.

• If you must use Air Force One, rename it The Peanut. What was good enough for you when you wanted our votes ought to be good enough when you've got them. And maybe even that much of a rejection of the "No. 1" syndrome would be good for the lot of us.

• Tell the Secret Service to stop flying those armor-plated limousines around the country at our expense, just so you can have one to ride in every time you jam up traffic with a motorcade in Chicago or somewhere. The local auto dealers will be glad to provide you with a slick new demonstrator for your personal transportation needs, and if not, you know all about Hertz and Avis. There may be some risk involved if you give up your armor plate, but if you're going to put the little "d" back in the White House, you can't really have it both ways.

Not Both Ways

• Find out how many times a day they played "Hail to the Chief" for Richard Nixon. Issue strict orders that it's to be played no more than half that many times for you, and not at all in the White House where you're the leader of the band. Whoever thought up that custom must have been one of those founding fathers who wanted to call the president "your majesty."

• Call up Bobby Byrd and Tip O'Neill, after they're elected Senate Majority Leader and House Speaker, and tell them you'd appreciate it if they reserve, say, the afternoon of the last Wednesday of every month (congressmen and senators take long weekends). Then you could drop in at the capitol at least that often and answer any questions the boys might have — reserving the right to say "no comment," if necessary.

One a Year

Victorian Roy Messum's gripe about the waste of paper involved in the jumbo-sized water bills the city sends out appear to be justified, on the face of it. The 10½ inch by 5½ inch envelopes, printed out by computer, do seem to be wasteful considering the minimal amount of information they convey.

However, the problem seems to be that the computer which spews them out requires paper that wide. The city is not in the business of redesigning computers and their associated software, but there is a way of saving money without going back to typing out the bills individually.

That is reducing the frequency of the bills, which now come to every water user six times a year. For most homes, it's about $4 every two months. That's a rather small amount of money to bother collecting so often. If the homeowner pays by cheque through the mail — the most common method probably — that adds at least 25 cents to the total bill of $4. Counting the cost of the envelopes (12½ cents each by Messum's figuring), that means to collect a $4 water bill it costs city and taxpayer 10 per cent of the bill.

Why can't the city reduce the frequency of the bills? Vancouver, for example, which is a partner in a co-operative water scheme similar to Greater Victoria, bills its citizens yearly with tax assessments.

That would considerably reduce the overhead, at city hall and for the homeowner — one bill a year, one cheque, one postage stamp. Or with the tax payment arrangements most people have with the banks that hold their mortgages, the banks would pay both taxes and water bill at the same time.

With the city looking high and low for ways to save money, this seems to be an obvious one.

RICHARD GWYN

Rene's Finance Minister

MONTREAL — You'd swear he was British. Toothbrush moustache, short hair, a plump, faintly ruddy face, club tie and three-piece grey suit. An army colonel, say, on staff back at headquarters. Or the manager of a medium-sized bank.

And so cool and so precise. To the question since the Parti Quebecois won, will there be a financial panic, Jacques Parizeau, the party's brightest economic star and, almost certainly finance minister in a PQ government, doesn't bother with denials.

He bothers, instead, with details.

"The Caisse de Depots (the provincial investment agency) has assets of more than $4 billion. That's more than Canadian Pacific Investments. It has, from pension plan contributions, a cash flow of $2 million a day. It's our instrument for stabilization. If people try to break the market for Quebec bonds by dumping them onto the market, the Caisse will buy up the bonds. It can do it as long as is needed."

This strategy, even if successful, would only buy time for the Parti Quebecois to cope with the inevitable crisis of confidence. How would the new government deal with the problem itself?

Dying Port

"Oh, maybe 10 private meetings with the money people, to make it clear that we're not fools, that we're not revolutionaries, that we don't intend to upset any applecarts. They'll understand. We'll also make it clear, though, that we are a government with a purpose, that we're not just in power for its own sake. And they'll understand that."

It takes time to discover the passion, and therefore the purpose, in Parizeau. It's near midnight, the end of an exhausting day that has stretched from a meeting with farmers in the kitchen of the Gaspard Plouffes in St. Sulpice to a public rally — most of the audience is under 25 — in Anjou. We are speeding back into Montreal, and we've talked about bond prices, share prices, investment, head offices, the future of Air Canada, of Canadian National Railways, of the port of Montreal ("It's dying anyway. What can you do with a port that only has 35 feet of water?"). What I ask, will happen to property values?

"What property values?" answers Parizeau. "Do you mean these?" and he points out at the bleak three- and four-storey walkups in Montreal's east end. "Do you really think independence would change their values? Or do you mean those in Westmount. Frankly, I don't give a damn about Westmount."

A product of universities in London and in Paris, the power behind both Liberal and Union Nationale premiers during the, for Quebec, golden years of the 1960s, now professor of economics at the University of Montreal, it is Parizeau who has to pick up the chips and pay the bill when the PQ comes to power. He's utterly confident the job can be done. He may be utterly wrong. He has, at least, an explicit answer for each question.

• Head offices moving out of Montreal? "That's sabres rattling in empty scabbards. All we've got left, already, is just a lot of shells. Texaco moved its credit department to Toronto and made the announcement six months later. That's how it's been done. In an independent Quebec, companies would have to re-establish, admittedly smaller, head offices here.

• Could Montreal survive except with the hinterland of Canada behind it? "Montreal long ago ceased to be a metropolis of Canada. It is now, though no one wants to admit it, a provincial metropolis only."

• Could Quebec's economy survive the two years of uncertainty that would dry up most investment until the referendum on separation was held and decided? "Won't there be the same uncertainty, but over a longer period, if the Liberals win a minority and we are just behind them? Remember, the Quebec government has a purchasing budget of $3 billion. We would use it: Companies that want our business would have to invest in Quebec."

• Still, would not a Parti Quebecois government headed directly toward separation frighten investors even more than a minority Liberal government? "Look, it was 20 years ago, under late Premier Maurice Duplessis when Quebecers couldn't have been more quiet unless they were all dead, that the Montreal stock exchange collapsed and Toronto picked up the pieces. The issue isn't federalism or separatism, it is good government. We'll provide that, and its all, despite all the talk, that businessmen want."

The chinks in Parizeau's case come at points where you don't expect, at first, to find them. His solution to almost every problem is more government. He sounds at times like a "quiet revolutionary" in exile, waiting for the chance to apply again the techniques and theories of the 1960s. He's vague about how the Parti Quebecois could discipline its union allies.

Speak White

Excepting that he hasn't made sufficfent allowance for the consequences of English-Canadian hostility and of at least a temporary drop in investment, flaws in Parizeau's after-a-Parti-Quebecois-victory-what? analysis are harder to find. Later, I tested out Parizeau's arguments on Claude Ryan, editor of the influential daily Le Devoir and a strong federalist. He accepts most of them, and adds another one: "You know, I believe English Canada has more confidence in Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque than it does in Quebec Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa."

Parizeau is so persuasive, so precise, and so reassuringly British, that it is easy to be swayed. It is easy, therefore, to forget that he is also a man with a mission. In every speech he gives, Parizeau, unlike most Parti Quebecois stars, mentions his party's commitment to independence. Shortly before he drops me off, Parizeau mentions the source of his own commitment. He holds up his left hand, the little finger sticking out slightly from the rest. "I got that when I was 15. The other guy told me to 'speak white.' I left him with more marks."

Myth of Equality

In this technological age, some medieval superstition persists. For instance, the theory of relativity co-exists with Russian "citizens" in forced labor camps and Canadian counterparts suffering the ultimate alienation of custodial solitary.

And the techniques that put two research devices on Mars keep company with the concept of "social" welfare in a class-divided society. The way these contradictions are resolved is reminiscent of Second World War German battleships. They were reported to be constructed of many air tight compartments, making them very difficult to sink. This seems to characterize the craniums of those who see social equality in minority ownership of the means of life.

The media has again reinforced the equality myth with the news that a Canadian cabinet minister squandered $740,000 from the public purse on unnecessary air travel. This is on a par with "how many angels can dance on the head of a pin?"

If there is anything the rich would rather do than suffer poverty, that thing is paying taxes, as disagreeable as this might be. Taxes are necessary for the maintenance of their system, although, through a slick state bookkeeping operation and propaganda the lowliest pensioner is convinced that he also pays.

In 1970, 87.7 per cent of all Canadians owned not a single share in industry, and in 1973 the top one-fifth of the population scooped an income 16 times greater than the bottom one-fifth.

The survival rate of the 200 of Toronto's 10,000 derelicts who sleep outdoors in winter is said to be low (Times, Feb. 11, 1976). The opposite must be concluded, at least for a time, of the myth of equality under this system of capital accumulation. — J. G. Jenkins, 959 Darwin Avenue.

Fine Show

I have just returned from watching a march past of various members of our armed forces on Remembrance Day.

The fine turnout of the younger members of said forces was very gratifying. These young boys and girls should really be highly commended on their neat clothing, precise marching and upright posture. Surely when our younger generation will take the time and effort to put on a display such as I've just witnessed, this country of ours will be in good hands in the years to come.

Thanks for a fine show boys and girls, and may all the best attend you. — (Mrs.) J. Wagstaffe, 711 Pine Street.

Rural Land

The rural land of North Saanich has been a controversial issue at every election since the beginning of organized local government in this area. Politicians have used the "preservation of rural amenities" to gain votes from the residential majority.

Beat down the greedy landowners, even if some of them are little old ladies or remnants of the families of original settlers. This paranoia has reached its climax with the present administration under Mayor Grieve, who by most shocking tactics, is pushing for the third reading of bylaw 194 before the election, after stating at the last public meeting that there was lots of time to send in objections and recommendations maybe six months or a year! Bylaw 194 is proposing a two-acre and seven-acre zone for rural land which has been two-acre-zoned since incorporation. Just at a time in our history when we should be seriously facing the fact of growth as being inevitable and which cannot be postponed indefinitely.

The rural landowners are a minority and as such have never been adequately represented on council. Not only are they expected to supply the "rural atmosphere" but their land has been the only source of additional revenue without which the residential areas could not begin to pay their way. The freezing of large areas of this land in the agricultural land reserve has been another blow to many rural landowners who have no desire — or the means — to pursue farming. Then the other level of government, the assessment authority, has under the past NDP government, slapped a 50 per cent tax factor on undeveloped land to pressure unused land onto the market for housing. Now local government, by trapping this land in a seven-acre zone, is trying to stop development. This is the last straw as far as many rural landowners are concerned and they are planning to organize as a group to work out their own destiny. The democratic system, when it fails to protect the rights of minorities, leads to fragmentation and the need to use power tactics to re-establish justice.

The rural landowners of North Saanich have been caught in the cross purposes of three levels of government and feel it is time to "take the bull by the horns" and are proceeding to do so. — Mrs. E. Gardner, 11145 Heather Road.

Serviced Land

Having read your article in the Nov. 9 Times entitled The Hospital Hassle Peaks, I must commend you for this excellent editorial.

However, there is something about this entire issue that escapes me, and this is, why hasn't the Glendale hospital—Wilkinson Road jail area been considered as a logical site for a new hospital?

I believe there are approximately 300 acres at our disposal, bought and paid for years ago. This area is already serviced, due to the Glendale hospital (water, sewage, etc.), and in addition to this, a heating plant is already situated there, which would reduce costs in this area. I could stand to be corrected, but this quiet area with a pastoral setting seems to me more logical than having a hospital situated on busy highways.

The present administration professes "paying your own way and balancing the books." I think someone is being sold a bill of goods.—Richard McKay, 1145 West Burnside Road.

If Carter Leads Canada May Follow

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — By losing the presidential vote to Jimmy Carter, Jerry Ford may have blown Joe Clark's election.

Since John A. Macdonald became Canada's first Prime Minister in 1867, no Conservative administration has ever come to office in this country while a Democrat occupied the White House.

And that's not just the long arm of coincidence stretching across more than a century. There is a reason for it.

Political attitudes and leadership expectations in Canada are strongly influenced by events south of the border. An activist administration and take-charge president in Washington make Canadians expect a similar performance from their leaders in Ottawa. The most dramatic example of this U.S. influence at work was the depression-era transformation of the archetypal Conservative Prime Minister, R. B. Bennett, into a full-blown New Dealer within 18 months of Franklin Roosevelt's assumption of the American presidency.

As it turned out, Bennett needn't have bothered. Liberals make far more plausible activists than do Tories, and the 1935 vote saw the return of Mackenzie King to the East Block with a massive majority.

Thirty years later, when Lyndon Johnson declared a War on Poverty in the U.S., Lester Pearson was only an echo behind with his counterpart declaration for Canada.

Although the timing of those two anti-poverty campaigns of a decade ago had everything in common, their forms bore little resemblance. In part this reflected the differences between existing programs in the two countries, but in larger measure it reflected the greater constitutional constraints on federal initiatives in Canada.

The main thrust of the U.S. "Great Society" effort lay in compensatory education programs — particularly for pre-schoolers and those in early grades — plus new and expanded social services and job training schemes.

All of these were in areas of exclusive provincial jurisdiction, but no matter. Canada's new social programming didn't have to be the same as that in the U.S., it just had to be as highly visible.

So instead of Head Start, Job Corps and Community Action, we got the Canada Pension Plan and Medicare, a Guaranteed Income Supplement for senior citizens and an extension of family allowances to age 18 for young people still in school. We also got the Canada Assistance Plan to extend federal cost-sharing of provincial welfare and social service programs.

The only element in that Canadian anti-poverty war that was patterned directly on a U.S. program was the Company of Young Canadians. Although described by Mr. Pearson as a "domestic Peace Corps", it was actually a replica of Lyndon Johnson's VISTA program (Volunteers in Service to America) rather than John Kennedy's Peace Corps.

CLARK
. . . won't help him

Interestingly, many of the U.S. programs which Ottawa couldn't duplicate for jurisdictional reasons nonetheless managed to have a major influence on developments in Canada.

Such initiatives as the integration of social services at community levels in multi-service centers, the use of para-professionals in providing these services, and the storefront lawyers approach to legal aid have all been adopted, to varying degrees, in various provinces. As well, some U.S. programs have been transported intact, such as the New Careers program in Manitoba, which retains even its U.S. name.

Other influences, though more general, were even more far-reaching. Most conspicuous in this category was the notion of "maximum feasible participation" in the design and implementation of programs by those for whom they are intended.

Those three little words from the Equal Opportunity Act (the official name of the U.S. War on Poverty bill) set in motion the waves of demand for participation which, by the end of the '60s, were engulfing universities, municipal councils and a raft of other institutions in this country.

So the impact of Jimmy Carter's presidency on Canadian events can't be predicted in terms of his policy proposals alone.

Large-scale job creation efforts, national health insurance, tax reform and a new welfare program to include the working poor are his announced priorities.

Any or all of these — with the exception of the health insurance scheme which is likely to be similar to our decade-old medicare program — could stimulate demands for counterpart initiatives in this country.

More importantly, though, an activist, interventionist Carter style seems certain to engender a disposition among Canadians toward such an approach in Ottawa. And that is the exact reverse of what has appeared the case of late.

Most Canadians have seemed to share Joe Clark's assessment that "What this country needs is calm."

That's a view which Jerry Ford would have wholeheartedly endorsed. But what Jimmy Carter promised — and American voters opted for — was action.

And the result, when the Carter administration takes office in January, is likely to have a profound effect on attitudes, expectations and political equations here in Canada.

If U.S. initiatives begin to pay dividends in terms of rising economic growth and falling unemployment, then the present Canadian fixation on restraint as an end in itself will soon wither.

If the U.S. moves strongly with measures to promote social justice through reform of its tax and welfare systems, then Canadians will quickly lose their current inhibitions about seeking social change in this country.

And unless Joe Clark can do a better job of impersonating a New Dealer than any of his Conservative predecessors managed, his current long lead in the opinion polls can be expected to erode as rapidly as it was assembled. Because more than a century of unvarying precedent says that what Canadians will perceive as their need a year from now is certain to be more ambitious than merely "calm."

Mexico Shaken by Gov't Changeover

By ALAN RIDING

MEXICO CITY — The latest sharp devaluation of Mexico's long-stable currency has brought new uncertainties to a country that is already suffering a serious crisis of confidence just two weeks before the inauguration of a new administration.

On one hand, acute political tensions are being fed by mounting evidence that President Luis Echeverria hopes to retain power and influence in the country after he leaves office Dec. 1.

On the other, economic unrest is being aggravated by the refusal of President-elect Jose Lopez Portillo to disclose his own plans for the future or at least to intervene publicly with an appeal of confidence and tranquility.

The new 24 per cent devaluation of the Mexican peso was thus provoked by worried Mexicans moving their money out of the country. But the measure has merely served to deepen the almost hysterical mood of Mexico's conservative upper and middle classes.

A plague of wild rumors that has hit all levels of society in recent weeks has gathered new force and, with no reliable information available in the country's government-dominated newspapers, nerves have been placed further on edge.

Government officials say that the rumors form part of a right-wing campaign to damage the reputation of the outgoing administration and to force Lopez Portillo to adopt more conservative policies after he takes office.

But while some of these rumors, such as an imminent coup, seem absurd, and others, such as a government plan to freeze personal bank accounts, have been specifically denied, the atmosphere of uncertainty is such that many Mexicans have been willing to believe them.

Political tensions traditionally rise in Mexico during the period of transition between administrations as politicians, civil servants and interest groups struggle to secure positions of influence in the next government.

But experienced political observers believe that the situation this year has been made unusually difficult by Echeverria's emergence as the strongest "lame-duck" Mexican president in recent memory, surrounding his hand-picked successor with his own close aides and taking decisions that will affect the next administration.

Anxious to avoid an open clash with Echeverria, Lopez Portillo, a strong-minded 56-year-old former finance minister, had carefully steered clear of any criticism of the outgoing government and has so far given only the vaguest hints as to the likely policies of his cabinet.

The question uppermost in the minds of Mexican politicians and businessmen, as well as of foreign diplomats, is therefore: Will the Lopez Portillo government be subject to the influence of Echeverria or will the new president be forced to clash with his predecessor in order to impose his authority?

Unable to seek re-election, Echeverria is now campaigning to succeed Kurt Waldheim of Austria as the next United Nations Secretary General, a bid that has the clear support of Lopez Portillo.

But should this effort fail, Echeverria will leave office with exceptional domestic political power, not only because his closest supporters will occupy the top congressional and ruling party leadership posts, but also because he controls a huge press empire comprising 39 newspapers throughout Mexico.

. . . clinging on

During a valedictory tour of the country, for example, Echeverria has been making highly provocative attacks on conservative business and farming groups with the verve of a president who had just taken office. "Rather than trying to unite the country for Lopez Portillo he's just polarizing the situation even more," one Mexico City lawyer complained.

In the conservative industrial city of Monterrey, Echeverria charged businessmen with exercising economic power "egotistically," and said they were bad Christians "because they beat their chests, which is easy, but do nothing to promote economic and social development."

Two days later, Monterrey business groups replied angrily in full-page advertisement in Mexican newspapers. "We are convinced that what the country needs now is confidence, tranquility and harmony and we earnestly hope that the next government will appreciate our efforts, re-establish confidence and not resort to verbal excesses," their statement said.

According to banking sources here, this angry exchange with the so-called Monterrey Industrial Group provoked the latest run on the peso and the new slump in its parity with the dollar, resulting in an effective devaluation of over 50 per cent since the peso was first floated Aug. 31.

"People here are in a great state of tension wondering what Echeverria will do next," a well-placed source in Monterrey said. "His attack here was really gratuitous, but on the other hand people know he's leaving and are just gritting their teeth until Dec. 1."

Analysts noted, however, that the new president will need both firm popular support and political strength in order to carry out the strict economic austerity program that he has indicated privately will be necessary during the next two years.

"My government is one of transition," because it prepared the way for the consolidation of the many social conquests that it initiated, Echeverria said in a recent interview published here. "My successor will lead the country along nationalist and revolutionary lines, as he has stated and proved."

Apology and Poison Gift

MARILYN AKEMI KAGA

(A letter to the editor of The Sun)

The recent "apology" by our esteemed and obviously opportunistic prime minister for Canada's treatment of Japanese-Canadians during the days of the Second World War reeks of hypocrisy. As a sansei or third generation Canadian of Japanese descent, I felt insulted and exploited by Mr. Trudeau's statements. The man was in Japan to sell Canada to the Japanese, especially the Canadian technological monster, the Candu reactor.

To a nation already on the brink of an environmental collapse, this salesman who moonlights as this country's leader was successful in contributing a gift of poison to a people already assaulted by the horror of congenital mercury disease and the hellish reality of nuclear radiation. The so-called apology was simply a ploy in the Trudeau bag of sales tricks.

If the prime minister had apologized for Canada's complicity in the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombings, he would have gained the respect of both the Japanese and Japanese-Canadians. Of course an apology like that would have been unwise if the point of your sales-pitch is to sell nuclear hardware.

I do not know if the Japanese were impressed, but I do know that many Japanese-Canadians were angry at this statement. If the apology was sincere, it should have been made to the Canadian citizens involved, to my mother and father and all those people who suffered the humiliation and the ordeal of Canada's concentration camps. It should have been made on the soil of our own country, Canada, and not on the shores of a foreign nation.

And furthermore, what good is an apology, unless it is accompanied by just compensation for the confiscated property of thousands of innocent, loyal and persecuted Canadians whose only "crime" was their ancestral heritage?

Where Peace is a Business

By GEORGE BAIN

GENEVA — Like a Swiss watch, or even a Swiss bank, there's something that sounds solid and reliable about a Swiss peace conference.

Geneva has been the market leader in the peace business for at least half a century. If the conferences held here over the years have not all been successes — a mild under-statement — at least they've had the right stamp on them, like a silversmith's hallmark.

That's why the British, discharging one of the last of the responsibilities of empire, decided to locate the Rhodesia conference here — that and the fact the United Nations would chuck in the conference room, caucus room, security services, press and television facilities.

Those are in the Palais des Nations, the old League of Nations headquarters (with later additions) on the shores of Lac Leman, a place of beige marble halls, heroic murals and expanses of plate glass.

Among the amenities of the palais, or at least its impeccable grounds, are peacocks, stalking about looking as haughty and anachronistic as ambassadors.

The international civil servants at the palais turn out conferences the way assembly-line workers at Ford turn out cars.

The other day, a young black African journalist, his first time in Europe, went to the central press office of the palais — a mistake, since the Rhodesia conference has its own — to demand his conference accreditation.

"Which conference?" said the person behind the desk.

But apart from getting the use of the place, and the fact that Geneva bestows status on any conference, Britain would have done better to set the thing up at Aberyswyth, or Torquay, or even Blackpool, where the delegates might have whiled away the evenings admiring the illuminations.

Better that than the Pussy Cat Saloon or the Ba-Ta-Clan night club, which promises "le cabaret le plus sexy," based upon "les 20 nus les plus audacieux."

In accepting to convene the conference, the foreign office then set out to put invitees on an allowance — 50 pounds sterling (about $80) per head per day for nine members of any delegation, plus air fares.

Considering that a single room with bath at the hotel where three of the African delegations are staying costs $55 a day and the prixe fixe lunch is $13.50, obviously not much is left for such luxuries as breakfast and dinner.

These sorts of costs are tolerable enough for the large Ian Smith delegation, which has the Rhodesian treasury behind it — at least until further notice — but how do the Rhodesian nationalist groups make out with no evident sources of income at all?

The answer seems to be that they get help from other African states.

One which acknowledges it is the delegation of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, which is living in modest circumstances in a small hotel near the central railway station, whereas Smith, at one end, and Nkomo, Mugabe and Sithole, the other end, are in luxury hotels along the quais.

Along with other help, the Muzorewa delegation has been given space in the quarters of the Ghanaian permanent mission here.

Home Auto Repairs Seen Declining

Times News Services

TORONTO — Discount stores and mass merchandisers face a decline in their share of the $13-billion auto repair market, according to Nathan Starr, executive vice-president of Acklands Limited, Canada's largest auto parts wholesaler.

"Major retailers have expanded sucessfully in recent years by offering discount prices on auto parts and providing large-scale repair facilities. But the trend is now heading the other way — baek to the independent garage and service statiog," Starr said Wednesday in a speech to Acklands' annual convention of suppliers and customers.

In the past 20 years, mass merchandisers have expanded their share of retail auto parts sale from 11 to 20 per cent. Service stations and garages have declined from 41 to 31 per cent of the market during the same period.

"As auto technology becomes more complix, the consumer won't be able to replace major parts as easily as he now does. Space-age technology is going to bring repair work back to the professional.

Merrill Lynch looks at the economic future

The ballots are in, and soon the political and economic ideology of a new U.S. administration will face the tests of reality. What will this mean for investors, business and the market?

The best minds at Merrill Lynch's New York research division, including the chief investment strategist, top economist, and senior market analyst, have assembled a comprehensive post-election report that deals in detail with these important issues. This report is now available in Canada through Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities.

The report addresses itself to the questions on every serious investor's mind, and includes an analysis of economic and market reaction to past presidential elections. How is the market likely to react? What changes can be expected in industrial production, GNP, taxes, corporate profits and employment? What about inflation and interest rates? Which industries are apt to benefit most?

Find out for yourself. Mail this coupon today for your free six-page booklet. It's time to start looking ahead.

ISSUE OF
NON-CALLABLE
GOVERNMENT OF CANADA BONDS
DATED DECEMBER 1, 1976

Bank of Canada is authorized by the Minister of Finance to receive subscriptions for a loan to be issued for cash as follows:

2 year 2 month 8¼% bonds due February 1, 1979
Issue price: 99.65% yielding about 8.42% to maturity
Interest payable February 1 and August 1
Two months' interest payable February 1, 1977
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

5 year ½ month 8½% bonds due December 15, 1981
Issue price: 99.50% yielding about 8.62% to maturity
Interest payable December 15 and June 15
One half month's interest payable December 15, 1976
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

24 year 10 month 9½% bonds due October 1, 2001
Issue price: 100.25% yielding about 9.47% to maturity
Interest payable April 1 and October 1
Four months' interest payable April 1, 1977
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $400 million of the new bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $400 million of Government of Canada 7% bonds maturing December 1, 1976 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 9½% bonds due October 1, 2001 are an addition to $300 million of 9½% bonds due October 1, 2001 and dated October 1, 1976 and will be eligible beginning January 1, 1977 for purchase by the Purchase Fund created October 1, 1976.

The new bonds will be dated December 1, 1976 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on December 1, 1976 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Canex-Placer

Placer Development Ltd. says its wholly-owned subsidiary, Canex Placer Ltd., will make an offer to purchase for cash all the issued shares of Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. of Calgary at $6.15 a share. The offer will be conditional on the tender of not less than 51 per cent of the issued shares by a date to be specified in the offer. The offer may be terminated if this condition is not met, Placer said in a news release. The Canex-Placer offer is .35 higher than the offer announced previously by Home Oil Co. Ltd.

Greyhound Lines

Greyhound Lines of Canada Ltd. has reported increased revenues for the first nine-months of 1976. Consolidated net income amounted to $7,215,964 which was equal to $1.54 per share. For the same period in 1975, net income was $7,095,805 or $1.52 per share. The increases in consolidated net income for Jan. to Sept. 30 resulted from increased revenues, which were $84,287,975 in 1976, compared with $71,676,006 in 1975. Revenues for the third quarter of 1976, July 6 to Sept. 30, were down slightly at $27,655,327 compared with $28,507,749 in 1975. This resulted in a slight decrease in consolidated net income of $3,202,585, equal to 68 cents per share, compared with $3,372,539 or 72 cents per share in 1975.

Expected Fund Flight A Trickle in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — A flight of capital from Quebec in the wake of the Parti Quebecois election victory has apparently not been substantial, a survey of some Montreal-area banks indicated Tuesday.

Bank managers in several branches in predominantly English-speaking areas said there was a small trend of account transfers while some said there had been no transfers. One assistant manager said "a fair amount of money" had been withdrawn from his branch.

The assistant manager of a Royal Bank of Canada branch said money had been transfereed for the last two weeks to Ottawa, Toronto and some American banks. But the amount "was not too significant percentage-wise."

Clifford Harris, manager of a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch in the west-end suburb of Pointe Claire, said only "a few scared people" had moved accounts out of the province. "They were mainly old retired people with a few thousand dollars; I'm surprised there weren't more."

Harris said his branch "had a lot of concerned inquiries, but we explained that their money is protected under the federal constitution."

The Royal Bank had reported Nov. 6 that "a substantial movement of deposits, mainly long-term deposits," were moving out of Quebec to branches in Ontario following election polls showing surprising PQ strength.

And on Tuesday W. Earle McLaughlin, president and chairman of the Royal Bank, issued a statement to reassure customers they had nothing to worry about.

BUSINESS PONDERS QUEBEC

The big question Canadian businessmen now face is whether they will feel kindly towards Quebec with the election of the Parti Quebecois, Purchasing Management Association of Canada president W. H. Porter of Toronto said here Tuesday.

It was somewhat reassuring to hear Rene Levesque in his victory speech say Quebecers will continue to feel kindly towards other Canadians, he said.

"But the big question is whether the rest of Canada will feel kindly towards Quebec."

He said businessmen in Ontario and other provinces have put up with extra costs for translations and have been subjected to the French language everywhere and have not openly complained.

"We haven't liked the extra costs but we have gone along with it in the interest of national unity," he said in an interview here.

"But if Quebec decides to separate, a feeling of resentment will sweep the rest of Canada. Purchasers will say: No way will I buy in Quebec."

Porter is president of an association of 4,000 senior purchasers in major business and government positions controlling more than $50 billion in orders per year.

He said up until Monday the Canadian business community has had cordial relations with Quebec despite the language problem.

The election of the Parti Quebecois, however, raises "dangerous possibilities," Porter said.

The St. Lawrence River, which flows through Quebec, is a lifeline for central Canada.

Many raw materials like iron ore and pulp from Quebec are needed in Ontario industries, he said. The economies of the two provinces are closely intertwined and both would suffer if trade was hindered.

Now that the Parti Quebecois has been elected, the federal government must take every measure it can to keep Quebec in Canada. Any illegal attempt to secede must be resisted, by armed forces if necessary, he said.

Porter was in Victoria to discuss with provincial government officials a national campaign by his association to increase the amount of Canadian-made goods purchased in this country.

He said Canada in 1975 had a $10 billion deficit in trade of manufactured goods, representing a loss of 200,000 potential jobs.

The Purchasing Management Association of Canada is making a national survey to find out how many buyers would be interested in obtaining Canadian-made goods in various fields.

"Once we find out how big the potential market is, we go to a (Canadian) manufacturer and say: Here is the market, why don't you make this product."

Constitution Draft Urged

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A national conference should be called in the wake of the Quebec election to draft a "Made-in-Canada" constitution, William Kashstan, national leader of the Communist Party of Canada, said Tuesday night.

Although the party supports the right of Quebec to separate from Canada, "we would fight with every ounce of energy we have to convince the people of Quebec that separatism is not in the workers' national interest," said Kashtan.

PQ Raises Separatists Hopes In B.C., Alberta, Maritimes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for Western Canadian separatist movements say they are optimistic the Quebec election result will add momentum to their own drives for secession from Canada by the end of the decade.

Ed Fleming, spokesman for the 1-year-old Committee for Western Independence (CWI), said Tuesday his group hopes to have enough members "to put pressure on Victoria" to call an election within a year.

"And if we're successful, B.C. would secede automatically and we'd phase in transfer of power," said Fleming. "We'd be the richest country in the world if we weren't tied to the squandering East — we'd plan for a tax haven and free port to attract investment."

Doug Christie, a Victoria lawyer and CWI president, said the movement now has about 1,500 members and he wants to have 50,000 before deciding whether to form a political party.

"Quebec has determined its own culture and future and we should demand the same right," said Christie.

Milt Harradence, former Alberta Conservative party leader and a member of the Independent Alberta Association, said his group is aiming for secession in 1979, the year in which both B.C. and Alberta are expected to have provincial elections.

The Parti Quebecois victory also means a period of reassessment and apprehension for Canada's 350,000 Acadians in the Maritime provinces.

In New Brunswick, where 240,000 Acadians make up the largest single francophone block outside Quebec, Donatien Gaudet, president of the New Brunswick Society of Acadians, says there may be changes.

If, in the event of separation, the federal and provincial governments show less interest in Acadians, New Brunswick's Acadians may have to look at other possibilities, including separation, he says.

Gaudet says the main irritant for New Brunswick Acadians is the slow implementation of the province's Official Languages Act passed in the late 1960s.

Another area of contention is the economic disparity between the Acadian areas and the rest of the province.

Premier Richard Hatfield reaffirmed on Tuesday his government's intention to maintain bilingual services in New Brunswick even if Quebec separates.

Paul Comeau, executive-director of the Acadian Federation of Nova Scotia, says Acadians in that province are firm federalists and, Quebec never has influenced their survival or development.

He says Acadians will have nothing to worry about if the federal government was sincere when it enacted laws to protect linguistic and cultural rights.

FOREIGN OWNERS OF ISLANDS LISTED

Foreigners own 30 per cent of the 7,500 acres that make up 72 of the smaller Gulf islands in the Capital Regional District.

Following is a list of foreign owners as of Dec. 31, 1975. The sources are the regional assessment rolls and the Companies Office.

Charles Island — eight acres, John Gale of Bellevue, Wash.

Julia Island — seven acres, Robert and Louie Hill, of Ellensburg, Wash.

Wallace Island — 182.09 acres, Wallace Island Holding Co. Ltd., incorporated Aug. 20, 1972; Gilbert Johnston of Seattle, president; Paul Bushue of Edmonds, Wash., secretary-treasurer; Edwin Arthur Popham of Victoria, director.

Tumbo Island — 260 acres, Point Developments Ltd., F. Christopher Dombrowsky of Zug, Switzerland, president; Ian Stewart of Victoria, secretary, John Relling of Victoria, director.

Pine Island a— one cre, Darryl Marsellus, Irvine, Calif.

Samuel Island — 470 acres, Norton Clapp, Seattle.

Secretary Island — 207.5 acres, Richard Riddell of Seattle.

Hall or Echo Island — 50.9 acres, Donald Grasing, China Lake, Calif.

Fane or Thain Island — 1.7 acres, Charles Martin, Palm Desert, Calif.

Mowgli Island — 8.93 acres, Delphine Haley, Seattle.

Small Island in Bedwell Harbor — .70 of an acre, Pender Paradise Properties Inc., Scottsdale, Arizona. Not registered in B.C.

Chads Island near Portland Island — 7.8 acres. Edwin Seipp, Atherton, Calif.

Castle Island in Ganges Harbor — two acres, John Hughes, Seattle.

Chocolate Island in Ganges Harbor — six acres, John Hughes, Seattle.

Hood Island — 4.04 acres, John Tytus, Seattle.

Parker Island — 402 acres, James Ewing, Steamboat Springs, Colo.

Island near Prevost Island — 7.6 acres, Marjorie Perrine, Soledad, Calif.

Island near Prevost Island — 3.8 acres, Paul Denison, Big-Horn, Wyo.

Small island in Long Harbor — 1.1 acres, Joseph Henderson, Seattle.

Small islands in Vesuvius Bay — .50 of an acre, Finn Lepsoe, Seattle.

Russell Island near Fulford Harbor — 40 acres, John Rohrer, Fulford Harbor, and Lynn Zinsley and Judith Rohrer, both of Los Angeles.

Jackscrew Island — 1.6 acres, Stimson Bullitt and Priscilla Collins, both of Seattle.

Portion of Little D'Arcy Island — 22.8 acres, William Boeing, Seattle.

Portion of Jones Island — 53.6 acres, William Cabeen, North Hollywood, Calif.

Shell Island — five acres, Ava Pischel, San Francisco.

Coal Island — 328 acres, Kemah Holdings Ltd., a subsidiary of Kemah Inc., Seattle.

Portion of Hill or Brethour Island — 40 acres, Herti Investments Ltd., Dr. Guenter Thiele, Hamburg, Germany, president. Company incorporated in Toronto, Sept. 26, 1973.

Portion of Domville Island — 65 acres, Richard Riddell, Seattle.

Portion of Gooch Island — 95 acres, Clarence Martin, Los Angeles.

Rubly Island south of Domville — four acres, John Brophy; Reno, Nev.

Sheep Island north of Domville — seven acres, Sheep Island Holdings Ltd., Newport Beach, Calif., Donald Easton of North Vancouver, president, Marcia Duval and Ann Neelley of Newport Beach, directors. Company incorporated Feb. 18, 1964.

Low or Halibut Island near Sidney Island — 9.67 acres, Stephen Franks, Little Shell Island, and Howard Kambach, Walnut Creek, Calif.

On the islands which have been heavily subdivided, Americans are in the distinct minority. On nine-acre Secret Island, for example, 39 owners are Canadian while one American, Harry Peterson of Bremerton, has a tiny lot, only .2 of an acre in size.

On Wise Island there are 43 Canadians (owning 23.8 acres) and seven Americans (3.55 acres). On Piers Island, there are 123 Canadian owners and only seven American.

Gulf Islands Going to Canadians

worthy, however, because it means for the first time in years Canadians now own more acreage on the smaller Gulf Islands in the Capital Region District than do foreigners.

A Times survey of 72 islands in the district shows foreigners own 2,320.8 acres on 39 of the islands while Canadians own 5,179 acres on 43 islands.

Yuil sees a trend developing.

Until 1973, he notes, nearly all major sales were made by Americans to other Americans. But in the past three years such trading has ceased.

There are many reasons for it, he suggests. Soaring property taxes is one. Problems in getting permission to develop or subdivide is another. And a third is a growing nationalistic feeling across Canada.

Americans are worried B.C. will introduce legislation like that passed in Ontario recently, he says. In Ontario, foreign land owners are required to pay a 20 per cent registration fee.

Yuil says developers have all but given up on the smaller Gulf Islands.

"Most of them feel there is just too much red tape, too much of a bureaucratic mess to go through to develop anything these days," he says.

But the real crunch has been with taxes.

"A few years ago," Yuil says, "an island owner might expect to pay a couple of hundred dollars a year in taxes. Now, it's a couple of thousand."

Bert Evans of H. W. Dickie Ltd. of Duncan, a specialist in island and waterfront real estate, notes the taxes on one small island have jumped from $5 to $700 a year in a six-year period.

"Foreign owners are saying, 'What's the point of paying such taxes — we get nothing in return,'" Yuil says.

It's not surprising, therefore, that two-thirds of the vendors listed with his firm are Americans.

Trying to find buyers is another matter. Yuil says there is plenty of interest, particularly among "locals" — businessmen in Vancouver, Victoria and Alberta — but few have the money to make an offer.

Other than the recent sales of Moresby and Goudge Islands, nothing has moved since 1973, he says.

He cites the example of Richard Riddell, a Seattle lawyer and owner of 207-acre Secretary Island, a long slender island lying to the west of Galiano.

For three years Riddell has listed the property for sale, asking $518,000 or $2,500 an acre. He's still waiting for an offer.

"In a situation like Secretary, I can see a group of three or four men — professional men — able to spend up to $100,000 each for a nice summer place," Yuil says.

Yuil believes islands' property is over-priced by as much as 60 per cent.

The problem is, he says, the appraised value of the islands is higher than what the current market will bear.

Trading in the islands fell off so quickly, so completely, he says, that there are no sales figures other than those for 1973 — the peak year — on which to base an appraised value.

He predicts prices will have to drop to pre-1970 levels before trading becomes active once again.

U.S. Pressures Release by Chile

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Chile's military government, under pressure from the United States on the issue of human rights, has announced the release of more than 300 political prisoners.

Gen. Hernan Bejares, the government's secretary general, said Tuesday all persons held under Chile's state-of-seige laws will be released immediately, except for 20 prisoners of "special dangerousness' who will be freed only if they accept exile.

Government sources said 323 persons were in jail for violations of the siege laws that allow military authorities to make arrests for virtually any political activities considered illegal.

Some of the prisoners have been jailed since the Sept. 11, 1973, coup that ousted the government of then-president Salvador Allende.

The government announcement came one day after U.S. president-elect Jimmy Carter said he might cut aid to Chile if it did not respect human rights.

Carter, in a news conference in Plains, Ga., said relations with Chile will be "very seriously affected by an absence of concern for human rights."

The U.N. general assembly was expected to vote its condemnation of Chile during the next week on the same human rights issue.

Earlier this year, the Chilean government released 305 prisoners one month after U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon warned during a visit to Chile that U.S. aid depended on human rights in the country.

Amnesty International reported in August, however, that "the wave of repression begun in May of 1976 does not seem to have declined in intensity."

Sudan Taps U.S. Arsenal

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Gerald Ford has taken another significant step to deepen United States' involvement in Africa by formally declaring Sudan, largest country on the continent, eligible for the purchase of American military equipment.

His declaration, to be made public Wednesday in the Federal Register, is a significant step in U.S. efforts to encourage Sudan to play a role as a buffer state to the more radical Arab and African states adjoining it.

Relations between the U.S. and Sudan were strained severely in 1974 when Sudanese President Jaafar Nimeri commuted the life sentences of the eight terrorists who killed U.S. ambassador Cleo Noel JR. and counselor George Moore in Khartoum, Sudan's capital, in 1973. Nimeri turned the terrorists over to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Now, as a result of President Ford declaring to Congress that selling "defence articles" to Sudan "will strengthen the security of the United States and promote world peace," the Mineri government is eligible to seek military equipment from the United States.

The Presidential declaration is expected to be followed by formal requests from Sudan for U.S. help to combat subversion from within and attacks from without.

Libya, on Sudan's northwest border, is the chief external danger to the Nimeri government. U.S. military officials said Sudan has a long way to go to build a credible defence against Libyan forces and predicted Sudan's modernization will start with basic items like trucks, rifles and armored cars rather than fancy items like American jet fighters.

Neither U.S. administration nor Sudanese embassy officials would disclose Tuesday night what U.S. military items Sudan would like to buy. One source predicted Sudan's first request would be for communications, sensors and related equipment to keep track of subversives.

CARTER, FORD WILL MEET NEXT WEEK

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Gerald Ford will meet with the man who turned him out of office in the White House early next week.

President-elect Jimmy Carter's office in Plains, visit to Washington since his election to meet with Ford and take a direct hand in transition planning here for his administration.

Carter's office in Plains, Ga., announced Tuesday that he will also meet Saturday with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

No time or agenda was announced for the Ford-Carter meeting, but it is expected to take place Monday or Tuesday.

RICHES ELUDE SPITZ

HONOLULU (AP) — His bank account may hold something less than the millions of dollars some thought he would make from movies and endorsements, but Mark Spitz says he's satisfied with life.

"I did the best I could as an athlete, and what happened next happened," Spitz said, recounting the four years since he set the athletic world buzzing with seven gold medals in swimming at the 1972 Summer Olympics.

Spitz rarely sees those seven gold medals now. They are locked in a bank vault.

"No, I don't go down to the bank and look at them," he said. "I haven't seen them since after I had that picture taken with them all on."

Although the glitter has dimmed a bit since winning the golds, the years had provided Spitz with a certain insight.

Spitz said he recently saw Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olympic decathalon winner, and advised him to carefully weigh all alternatives before plunging into a career.

"Not everybody knows what he's doing," Spitz said. "You can't make a career out of signing endorsements."

Pill May Be Linked To Tumors

BUFFALO (UPI) — A new study indicates there may be a link between the use of birth control pills and the increasing number of benign liver tumors in women.

The preliminary results of a survey being compiled by the Roswell Park Memorial Institute here concludes that "the difference in the proportion of benign tumors in users and nonusers (of oral contraceptives) is striking and would seem to support the suggested association between use of oral contraceptives and benign liver tumors."

The report, presented to the national cancer advisory board and the president's cancer panel, said the once-rare tumors had become "more common" and pose a "serious health problem, which may, very occassionally, turn malignant."

Dr. Gerald Muphy, director of Roswell Park, who prepared the report, said that while the tests are not conclusive, "there is still an urgent need" for further study of the pill "considering the widespread use of the oral contraceptive."

He said a "more thorough report" is now being prepared, but in the meantime recommended that doctors be more alert to possible liver problems in women using contraceptives and further screening for liver problems before the pill is prescribed.

The study, based on the reports of 365 hospitals across the country, showed a total of 432 liver tumors — both malignant and benign — in men and women between 1970-75. Of the 283 cases involving women, 134 involved those who used oral contraceptives.

Of those women using birth control pills, 75 per cent had benign liver tumors and 25 per cent had malignant tumors, compared to an even 50 per cent division of malignant and benign liver tumors among women not taking the pills.

'MEGAMOUTH' SHARK

HONOLULU (AP) — "Megamouth," a huge deep-sea shark caught by accident and thought to be a new species, has the jaws of a movie star. But sicentists say his feeding habits probably would make him less than fearsome.

The 12-foot, 1,500-pound shark was hauled in from the Pacific Ocean depths — 500 to 1,000 feet down — just off Oahu this week. He had become entangled in the anchor lines of a Navy research vessel and apparently suffocated because he could not move enough to provide respiration.

Leighton Taylor, director of the Waikiki Aquarium at the University of Hawaii, and another ichthyologist, Paul J. Struhsaker of the National Marine Fisheries Service, are studying the fish, which has been placed on ice at a local tuna cannery for presevation until a container his size can be built.

Taylor said he gave the shark the nickname "Megamouth" because its mouth is "huge." But he said, that judging from its tiny teeth, the fish fed on small sea life and wouldn't even have been tempted by a baited hook.

"We'll know more about what he eats when we cut him open, but we don't want to do that now because it would make things kind of messy down at the cannery," he said.

He also said the shark may have been equipped with a headlight.

"There is some evidence he can produce bioluminescence because there appear to be photophores in the mouth area," said Taylor. He said many fish living at the shark's depth can produce light.

Men's Shorts Checked Out For Clues to King's Killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pair of men's shorts with an unusual laundry mark was one of the clues that FBI agents pursued in their search for the assassin of Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968, newly released FBI files show.

Agents also investigated seven men named John Willard because the suspected assassin used that name when he checked into a rooming house near the hotel where King stayed on his fatal visit to Memphis, Tenn.

Those details emerged in a review of 442 pages of FBI files on its investigation of the April 4, 1968, slaying of the civil rights leader. The FBI released the documents from a total of 18,000 pages to comply with requests under the Freedom of Information Act. There was no indication when additional files will be made public.

A House of Representatives committee now is investigating the King slaying.

The first batch of papers dealt with the investigation's early days and did not refer to James Earl Ray, who was arrested in London on June 8, 1968, and pleaded guilty to shooting King. Ray, now serving a 99-year prison term, has since recanted and is seeking to change his plea.

The papers showed that hundreds of FBI agents chased scores of rumors and tips from citizens and tried to use such clues as the shorts and a man's T-shirt to track the killer's identity. The underwear was found in a suitcase the assassin apparently left at the rooming house.

'I Kicked Him Up, Hit Him in Mouth'

An ex-wrestler roughed up a holdup man, grabbed his rifle and spoiled the escape of the bandit and a companion during a robbery late Tuesday at the 25-Hour Chevron Service at the Trans-Canada and Tillicum Road.

"I told him, 'You're not going to get away with that,'" said Regent St. Jean, 47, one of two attendants working at the station.

The robbers were set to drive away, but when St. Jean interfered, they fled on foot and were arrested by Saanich police shortly after.

Ross B. Elworthy, 21, of 1683 Foul Bay, and Edwin H. Wilkinson, 22, of 513 Ardersier, were remanded without plea to Thursday when they appeared in provincial court today.

They are charged with armed robbery and possession of offensive weapons.

St. Jean, formerly of Montreal, said if was the second time he has successfully disarmed a holdup man. He agreed it was a dangerous thing to do, especially when the service station robber looked like a bigger man.

"I had no choice. I thought he might be going to shoot us anyway, so I kicked him and hit him in the mouth. It happened so fast, I just grabbed the gun."

St. Jean, who weighs 157 pounds, was at the gas pumps when one of the robbers walked into the office with the rifle.

David Murdoch, of Sooke, was on duty and St. Jean saw through the window that the man had a gun on him. Murdoch had taken all the bills from the till when ordered by the gunman: "Give me money, give me money."

When the rifleman emerged from the office, St. Jean went into action, kneed the man and took the rifle.

The robber started for a car and shouted to an accomplice who was waiting there.

"He yelled at the other one, 'Use your gun,'" St. Jean said.

When the bandits ignored St. Jean's order to stand still, he fired the gun.

The two men then ran off.

Police found a second rifle in the abandoned car. They also recovered a sum of money but did not disclose the amount.

Murdoch said when the rifleman came into the office, he thought the man was a hunter because of the gun and the way he was dressed.

St. Jean said he was held up eight years ago in the street outside a Montreal club by a man with a pistol.

The man wanted his car, but St. Jean caught the man off guard, struck him and took the gun.

OK Given Heart Unit Expansion

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland today approved expansion of Royal Jubilee Hospital's open heart surgery unit so it can do six instead of four of the intricate operations a week.

The work, to cost about $50,000 and take about three months, will ease the lengthy waiting list at the only unit of its kind on Vancouver Island. At present Jubilee is booking open heart surgery into next May.

The Unit now does four operations each week and frequently five when emergency situations arise. Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said today he expects that when the expansion is completed, emergency situations will mean there are sometimes seven operations a week.

Open heart surgery involves sophisticated work on the heart at rest using a heart-lung machine. Teams of up to 12 replace faulty valves, repair other other major heart defects and install tiny bypass veins around clogged heart arteries.

The addition involves expansion of post-operative care facilities for the most part. Open heart patients require intensive care in the first few days after their surgery and lack of these has limited the number of operations.

The hospital asked provincial approval for the expansion in a brief seven months ago and during the summer some patients awaiting surgery wrote expressing worry over the delay. They were waiting up to three months then, depending on the urgency of their case.

Now, That's A Hot Line!

Telephone users often burn up the wires but rarely consume the whole instrument, as happened Tuesday.

Mrs. G. R. Arnold, 2515 Prior, called Victoria firemen — on another line —to say there were sparks coming from her phone.

Deputy chief Mike Belton said when firemen arrived they found the phone destroyed by the fire and damage to a desk and some nearby magazines and curtains.

Belton could offer no explanation. "I've never heard of such a thing," he said.

Fonzies: 'Sit on It' They All Say

Neighbors claim a dining lounge on Cordova Bay Road is being "run as a joint", with the two partners "pushing booze" instead of food.

They also allege policemen investigating complaints have glossed over the facts because they're friendly with the owners.

Today, Gary Kelly, who with Dan Koller operates the Duke's Dining Lounge at 4558 Cordova Bay, commonly known as Fonzies, denied both charges.

They were made earlier this week when a delegation, led by Don Ray of 4566 Cordova Bay Road, asked Saanich council for action.

Their complaints will be investigated by council's liquor review committee. Council will then decide before the end of the year whether or not to ask the Liquor Control Board to revoke Kelly and Koller's licence.

"That is not an eating place," Ray told council. "I've watched families go in there and promptly come out. They're not selling food, they're pushing booze."

Ald. David Paterson backed up Ray's claim and said all members of council should "go there to see what's going on".

"I know what's going on there," he said, "It's supposed to be a family restaurant but you can go there and drink all night and listen to the music. Later on, you'll get a plate of food . . . compliments of the house."

"That's a crock of beans, the guy's just trying to get his name in the paper," Kelly retorted. "We've never given food away."

Kelly said Fonzies used to serve prawns and French fries for $1.50 but the liquor board said this was not enough. In August the menu was changed to include, for the same price, a smorgasbord of salads, chow mein and chili.

Chief Bob Peterson also contradicted Ray's claim that police officers investigating 25 complaints had been lenient in their reporting because of friendship with Kelly and Koller.

"I don't agree with that kind of comment, that the report was slanted," Peterson said. "When you've got 106 persons in this department it would be impossible to pick only friendly ones to carry out the operations."

Peterson said it is up to council to set the guidelines, as far as a business licence is concerned, and the liquor board, in regard to the liquor permit.

Ray, who operates the Canterbury and Coachman Inns, said the noise from Fonzies is so bad that he has had to change his lifestyle.

"I'm unable to sleep before 2 a.m. and, when I have important meetings, I have to sleep downtown at a motel. On Sunday at 3 a.m. it was still going on."

Kelly denied the claims.

"I left at 10 to 12", he said, adding the last customer had left 25 minutes before that.

He, too, said, Fonzies received no special treatment from the Saanich police.

"They used to harass us like crazy," he said. He said this had stopped because the noise had been toned down and a commissionaire hired.

Kelly said neither Ray nor any of the other residents have lodged complaints with him or Koller.

Ask The Times

Q. Will you please clarify something for me in connection with the size of Beacon Hill Park? On the stone plaque up by the flag pole it states that the park comprises 154 acres. On the story printed on the notice board at the end of Goodacre Lake it says 184 acres. On the map over by the deer pen it says 154 acres, while right alongside it, where the history of the park is described, it states it comprises 184 acres. In the interest of accuracy it would be interesting to know just which acreage is correct. W.B.H.

A. The actual total acreage of the park is 181.4 acres, according to the city's parks department. The variance in the two figures posted in the park is due to the acreage of roads within the park not being included in the lesser figure, that is, 154 acres.

Police Seek Witnesses

Saanich police are appealing for witnesses who saw a 1968 Plymouth sedan shortly before it crashed in the 580-block West Saanich Road early Tuesday.

Its driver, Lyle Bruce Dobbyn, 36, of 1751 Cedar Ave., remains in poor condition with head and chest injuries at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He was found unconcious and pinned behind the wheel of the car in a ditch after it struck a tree.

Nearby residents apparently did not hear the crash and the accident was not discovered until a passerby noticed the car and woke up a resident about 2:20 a.m.

Classy Wharf Costly Place

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The cost of boat moorage has hit $2 per lineal foot per month.

And, for that price, you get water supplied but no power.

The moorage is in front of Hartwig Court on Wharf Street in the Inner Harbor and is being advertised by Trevor Davis of Hans Hartwig's company, Diversified Holdings Ltd.

Why so high, when moorage at such places as Oak Bay Marina is available at 95 cents per foot per month under a yearly contract and $1.50 per month on a monthly basis?

"It's an exclusive spot," Davis says, "We don't want old boats. We want newer boats, preferably 50-footers."

He says high taxes forced the peak rate.

"The foreshore leases cost so much and the taxes on our parking lot alone would choke a horse," he said.

At least one marina operator feels Diversified Holdings is justified in charging $2 per foot on a monthly basis.

A spokesman for Bosun's Marina Ltd. in North Saanich says, "If you can get moorage in Vancouver for $2.50 a foot you're extremely lucky. The rates have not gone up in proportion with the costs."

He said wharfage rates must be increased some time, in the near future or marinas will be forced out of business.

Bosun's Marina charges $1.15 per foot on a yearly basis.

"We will be forced to increase our fees or take out our floats so that houses can be built on it (the property) and say to heck with it."

Westport Marina is another marina that now supplies moorage on a yearly basis only, setting a fee of $1 per foot with the year beginning April 1 and ending March 31. Van-Isle Marina's year starts Aug. 1 and the annual fee is $1.20 per foot per month.

The West Bay Marina in Esquimalt is the closest to Diversified Holdings' project and charges a rate of $1.15 per month but moorage is at a premium.

More and more Vancouver and Seattle boats are being moored at marinas and yacht club basins in this area as moorage, even at much higher prices, becomes more scarce in their vicinities.

Home Dropped From Heritage Designation

After successfully defending a court challenge which sought to overthrow the demolition freeze on a heritage home, Victoria city council decided Tuesday that the building — at 1040-1042 Linden — isn't worth saving after all.

It was one of 77 residential buildings included in council's emergency bylaw passed last July. The owners of the property, developers Krieger Stricker Co. Ltd., who planned to demolish it for a condominium project, contested the validity of the bylaw but a B.C. Supreme Court ruling found in the city's favor.

The firm had pointed out that a demolition permit had already been approved by City Hall before the emergency bylaw took effect.

During a council tour Monday of some of the homes on the list, now proposed for heritage designation, developer George Stricker told aldermen that failure to complete the project was costing the firm $300,000.

After inspecting the building several council members said they were convinced it was not worth preserving.

In other business at its caueus session Tuesday, council gave approval in principle to a proposal which it hopes will give some assurance that heritage homes, once designated, will be preserved.

Under the program, owners of such homes could apply to a city-established heritage improvement fund for grants to repaire and maintain their buildings. The grants would be equal to their annual gross property taxes.

Full taxes would be payable as usual, and the program would be financed from the city's general revenues. Estimated cost of administering the fund next year is $50,000 to $55,000.

Meanwhile, council was reminded that the emergency bylaw protecting the list of 70-plus homes runs out Dec. 31, by which time all individual heritage designation bylaws may not have been fully processed and received provincial cabinet approval.

As a form of legal insurance, aldermen agreed it would be sensible to extend the emergency bylaw — probably by at least a three-month period.

In addition to the Krieger Stricker property, council struck off 13 other homes from the list proposed for designation.

Cranston: Much more than just a magnificent skater

'Inhibition Is a Very Deadly Enemy,' Says Toller

max low

Sitting and talking with Toller Cranston as he languishes on an elegant sofa in the Olde England Inn somehow is like being in another world.

He is dressed in a stark suit of black corded-velvet and around his waist is a wide belt with large brass buckles. A huge fur coat is draped across a gigantic canopied four-poster bed.

Yet it is not the clothes. Nor the surroundings.

It is Toller himself.

It is this young Canadian who has set the world alight with his skating; who seems to have everything yet wants more, demands more; who is not satisfied even with the best; who is so different and seems to come from somewhere far off . . .

But as you talk you know he doesn't intend it to be that way. He has been hailed wherever he has appeared as a magnificent athlete, a magnetic showman and as the most controversial figure in the skating world today.

"I think eccentricity and controversy are things that, if one is aware of them, are invalid," Toller says simply. "I don't feel I'm eccentric or controversial. I feel that what I've learned is that inhibition is a very deadly enemy to everyone.

"People who cultivate eccentricity are never really eccentric. You can only be what you think you are. So this is someone else's opinion of me — not my own."

Toller smiles a wry kind of smile.

"I try not to read my own press because someone once told me, and I think it's true, that if you ever start to believe what people say of you then it's the beginning of the end. You must never think of yourself as being what other people think of you. You must think of you being you."

But what is he? What is this man who after 20 years of competition and countless medals has turned professional and, after spurning the existing shows, has set off to tour North America with his own company (it will be at Memorial Arena tonight and Thursday night) calling itself simply The Ice Show?

He is an artist, on and off the ice. A painter, a writer. But never just a skater.

His art work has won him acclaim. His first book "Toller" which wasn't about skating but told in a artistic way what it is like to perform, was 35 weeks on the best-seller list. His second book "A Ram on the Rampage" which is about the adventures of Super Ram and is a spoof of the Zodiac sign Aries, will be out in a couple of weeks. And already he is working on this third book "The Strawberry Planet" which he hopes people of all ages will be able to relate to.

Yet Toller Cranston doesn't regard himself as a writer.

"Then, I don't regard myself as a dancer, either, yet I've always tried to dance on the ice," he points out with a smile. "I've always tried to be myself. Writing is very easy if you just write like you talk."

And he is not a man who has become embittered because he didn't win an Olympic gold medal.

"Many people ask me that, but for me that never existed," he says and you believe him. "I'm happy with what I have. I never regarded it as a definitive measuring stick. I've never felt that way about figure-skating that winning was the whole answer.

"It's not that I didn't want to win. I did. Of course I did. And I tried as hard as I could. But because I didn't win, I don't have a cross to bear for the rest of my life. I haven't even begun yet. Your whole life, your whole approach to things, cannot be judged in five minutes. The real judges are the audiences of the world—they seem to know."

But is he the greatest, this man who has so often been called the "Nureyev of the ice" and the "skater of the century"? He was Canadian senior champion for six years in a row. Three times he was judged the world's top free-skater. Is he the best?

"It's not important if you're the best," he says with sincerity. "Why must we always classify everyone? Do we have to know who's the best? We don't compare artists. You must just go out and perform."

And to Toller Cranston, that is everything.

"Turning professional hasn't changed my skating; except perhaps to give me more freedom because it is my show," he explains. "But I don't think that money has anything to do with how you perform on the ice. I don't think that changes you. It hasn't changed me.

"I'm enjoying life very much at the moment. I can buy anything I want and my taste leans toward the exotic and the very bizarre. Yet I can lead the simplest life and be happy. The only important thing is my work. It's the only thing that makes sense to me. It's the only thing that hasn't disappointed me. People, relationships, lifestyles, are very flexible but your work is the one constant thing. So life is becoming very simplistic to me in a way. I need light and peace to create and really it's a supreme source of pleasure for me to do that."

Toller admits to being a perfectionist and a hard worker and to expecting so much from his cast that "even the best isn't good enough."

And now, what can be better? What else can there be for this man who at only 27 has already achieved so much?

"If I had a wish, it would be to be allowed to go to the limit in the things that interest me," he confides "I know that I have an ability to act and I want to make skating a launching pad to other careers. I never want to be put in a niche. I don't want to be known as the skater."

"I want to be me . . ."

Foreign Control Up to 40% in B.C. Forestry

Foreign ownership and control of B.C.'s most important resource, Dr. Peter Pearse says in his report, has attracted more public interest than any other aspect of the forestry industry.

Pearse identifies about 250 controlling companies in B.C., of which 29 are either completely or mainly controlled by foreign interests.

In other words, while companies with all or majority foreign ownership comprise only 11 per cent of the total number of companies, they control between 30 and 40 per cent of the timber rights and manufacturing capacity.

But Pearse concludes that the B.C. government, while remaining aware of the foreign control, need not place further restrictions on these companies.

The report reveals a dramatic concentration of timber holding and manufacturing in the province by a few massive and integrated firms.

On the coast, 10 controlling companies hold the rights to 85.7 per cent of the allowable timber cut.

The production of those 10 companies in 1974 represented 76.3 per cent of the total coastal harvest.

Pearse identifies the big 10 as MacMillan Bloedel, B.C. Forest Products, Rayonier, Crown Zellerbach, Canadian Forest Products, Tahsis, Weldwood, Rurocan, Bay Forest Products and B.C. Cellulose.

The report emphasizes that B.C. needs a more diverse industry with a wide range of sizes and specializations among firms.

Pearse expresses concern that timber policies have left smaller, unintegrated firms at a disadvantage.

The province's forest industry, Pearse says, has passed through a period of remarkably rapid expansion and change, "but it is now clear that it faces serious obstacles to further growth."

The profitability has declined in recent years and the industry's traditional advantage in superior timber is eroding and the costs are high compared to those of competitors elsewhere.

The degree of foreign participation in B.C.'s forest industry does not appear to warrant as much concern as that in many other sectors of the Canadian economy, he says.

"In short, the present level of foreign participation in the province's forest industry does not appear to be especially critical in the context of the general issue of foreign ownership and control in the Canadian economy, and I can see no justification for special measures to alter it independently from other industries."

Financial problems of the industry can be helped if public forest administration does not impose unnecessary expenditures in resource development and burdensome capital requirements and carrying costs.

Pearse recommends changes in policies affecting expensive road building requirements and suggests other measures to develop more vigorous markets for intermediate products.

Pearse suggests extensive changes in the organizational structure of resource agencies, such as the B.C. Forest Service, and recommends the incorporation of the forest service and the fish and wildlife branch into a new department of forest and wildlife resources.

Regional district boards, Pearse recommends, should be given the responsibility for regulating activities on the about five per cent of timber land in B.C. owned privately.

Regional district boards, with participation from government agencies, should be ably equipped to administer minimum forestry standards for private land within their jurisdiction.

Quake Shakes Baffin Island

OTTAWA (CP) — An earthquake measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale occurred Friday on a remote section of Baffin Island, the energy, mines and resources department said Tuesday. The earthquake occurred on an isolated coast about 90 miles southeast of Pond Inlet, N.W.T.,

Ban Timber Land Sales Says Pearse

would give the provincial government greater control over forest licences, they would also give companies a feeling of stability because they could apply to the end of five years for the licence to be renegotiated for another 10-year term. At no time need a licence have less than five years to run before expiry date.

He said a key feature of months of hearings was the need to replace the present complicated licencing structure with a simple formula.

He said it is vital to replace open-ended, indeterminate and informal arrangements with contracts of short duration with specific renewal procedures.

The government must balance the need for security of tenure with the opportunity for outside companies to bid freely for the timber resources.

The forest licence should form the core of the new tenure system, Pearse said.

The forest licence system should replace the present timber sale harvesting licences as they expire.

Pearse also recommends that the provincial government take whatever legislative steps necessary to declare that no timber licences are perpetual.

Before 1958 there were 23 licences granted in perpetual terms. In 1958 this system was replaced by a limit of 21-year terms but controversy continues as to whether the licences granted prior to 1958 can be regarded as perpetual.

"I have concluded that the necessary legislative steps should be taken to establish clearly that the 16 contracts issued prior to 1958 shall not be perpetual," Pearse said in his report.

Pearse said his not judging the legal aspects of the case but is stressing the desirability of having the provincial government retain control over its forest reserves.

"My conclusion is not based solely on the desirability of resolving legal ambiguities surrounding the duration of these agreements before 1979 when they could well come to a head before the courts, although that is important. Of more fundamental concern are the substative policy issued raised by perpetual tenures over Crown land."

The provisions required in contracts inevitably change with time, he said.

Contract forms that might have made sense 50 years ago are now out of date and future governments must have the flexibility to make further changes.

ECONOMY THUMP SEEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia economy will suffer the consequences in 1977 of "past excessive increases in wage rates and of the social legislation of recent years," a conference sponsored by the Association of Professional Economists of B.C. was told Tuesday. Herbert Grubel, professor of economics at Simon Fraser University in nearby Burnaby, told the economic outlook conference: "B.C. industry will be non-competitive, profits and investment will be low, net immigration will be negative, government revenues and expenditures will stagnate."

He referred to data which showed that average B.C. wage rates in manufacturing are $6.55 an hour, while the national average is $5.06 and in the United States, $4.81.

He said productivity was not likely to increase to offset the drain in wages and it would be a long time before the province's foreign competitors caught up with B.C. wage scales.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said today that indications are Canada's economy will lapse into recession by late next year or early 1978.

The Commerce Leading Indicator, the bank's quarterly index aimed at monitoring the economic performance, said a pause in the United States recovery and uncertainties over the federal anti-inflation program "have clearly jeopardized our recovery."

Rhodesia Blacks Ready to Talk

GENEVA (UPI) — Militant Rhodesian black nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo backed down today and said they are prepared to start talking now with Britain about the formation of a pre-independence interim government.

The two, partners in a "Patriotic Front," had previously refused to discuss any other issue unless Ivor Richard, British chairman of the Rhodesian peace talks, set a definite and binding date for Rhodesia's independence under black majority rule.

"We are now studying the British proposals for the shape of the interim government and are waiting for the chairman to arrange bilateral talks with us on the subject," a Patriotic Front spokesman said.

Richard had refused to set any firm date, arguing that this would depend on how long it will take to complete the legal and constitutional steps involved in the independence process.

He left Mugabe and Nkomo waiting in their respective hotels while he called in other black nationalist leaders to get on with discussion of the interim government.

Richard met Tuesday with Ndabaningi Sithole and Wednesday called in Bishop Abel Muzorewa, of the African National Council.

British officials said low-level contacts were maintained with Mugabe and Nkomo and there were no signs "quite the contrary" that they would quit the conference as they had threatened.

Meanwhile, U.S. intelligence sources reported the Soviet Union is increasing military aid to Rhodesian guerrillas.

Sources say a Russian ship unloaded 18 heavily-armed armored vehicles and ammunition in Tanzania in recent days. Tanzania has served as a relay point for Soviet arms bound for the black Rhodesian guerrillas, the sources say.

This report followed another intelligence dispatch last week saying that a Tanzanian ship delivered Russian rocket launchers and armored vehicles to Mozambique, a staging area for guerrilla attacks into white-ruled Rhodesia.

60,000 DEAD

GENEVA (TNS) — About 60,000 people have been killed and 200,000 wounded in the Lebanese civil war, Ghassan Tueni, Lebanese information minister, said Tuesday. About 1,500,000 people need urgent help and many are maimed or handicapped, he told a news conference.

Trial Run on Alcohol

BRASILIA (AP) — Three cars fueled entirely with alcohol have completed a 5,000-mile tour of Brazil to publicize alcohol as a substiture for gasoline.

Technicians for the Brazilian air force, which sponsored the marathon, said the modified engines performed flawlessly in all weathers and got 36 miles to the gallon on asphalt and 30 miles on a 950-mile stretch of dirt road.

The three cars—a Volkswagen 1300, a Dodge Polara and a Gurgel jeep—were welcomed home at the air force research centre in Sao Jose dos Campos Monday by a military band playing the popular samba song "You Think that Whisky is Water?"

The use of alcohol as a fuel in combustion engines is not a new idea. But with Brazil spending nearly $4 billion a year to import 80 per cent of the oil it uses, some government officials see the country's sugar cane crop—the world's largest—as a potential source of alcohol to substitute for gasoline.

Alcohol as a fuel is entirely free of pollutants, its advocates say, its exhaust consists of carbon dioxide and water vapor, the same exhaust produced by a human being exhaling.

Air force engineer Miguel Azevedo, who drove one of the cars, said the alcohol fuel improved acceleration because of its higher octane content and reduced engine wear because it was cleaner.

Gasoline in Brazil now costs about $1.60 per gallon. Engineers refuse to predict how much alcohol fuel would cost if produced on a scale sufficient to fill even part of the country's needs. But the air force and other advocates say large-scale production from the abundant local sugar cane would eventually bring the cost way down.

LEADS COUGARS PAST WINTER HAWKS

'Fourth' Line Frolics

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Mike Toal, Alvin Szott and John Gordon make up the so-called fourth line for Victoria Cougars, but the designation could improve if the three maintain their recent pace.

Each contributed a goal Tuesday as the Cougars, striking back from an early 2-0 deficit, defeated Portland Winter Hawks 8-3 in a Western Canada Hockey League encounter at Memorial Arena.

Toal checked in with his fourth goal of the season, Gordon broke through for his first WCHL tally and Szott ran his total to six, four of which have come in Victoria's last three games.

As a line, the three have scored six goals in the past three games.

"It's a big plus when the line, put together for checking purposes, produces as they have," said Cliff Lennartz, the Cougar scout who now has a 4-1, won-lost record as a coach. Lennartz has handled the Victoria squad for the past week and a half while Pat Ginnell has concentrated on front-office chores.

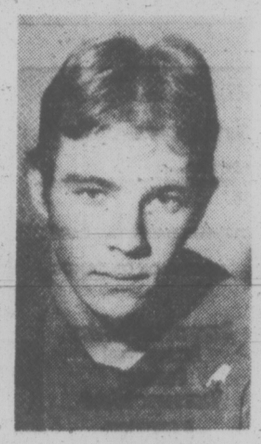
If the name of the game is hard work, the Toal-Szott-Gordon unit is the equal of any other line. That's why the goals have been coming, although the three haven't been neglecting checking duties.

The all-rookie combination has been on the ice for only one of the eight goals scored against Victoria in the last three games. That one minus mark was recorded in Kamloops Sunday but Szott atoned for it by scoring the winning goal in a 3-1 victory.

The rookies' style Tuesday helped contribute to another strong team effort that delighted Ginnell.

"These guys just won't give up," said Ginnell, who reminded that the Cougars trailed 3-1 at one stage before coming back to score an 8-4 victory over Kamloops here Saturday night.

Tuesday, the Hawks struck for goals on their first two shots and led 2-0 after only 85 seconds of play. The rest of the evening, however, belonged to the Cougars.



ALVIN SZOTT
. . . going great

Gregg Anderson shared the limelight with the rookie line by scoring three goals — all brilliantly-executed — and drawing an assist on another by centre Gary Lupul. The four-point night moved Anderson into sole possession of the scoring lead with 45 points.

Curt Fraser accounted for Victoria's other goal.

Blake Wesley, Paul Mulvey and Jeff Elkow connected for the Hawks, who suffered only their second loss in 13 games.

Contributing much to Victoria's success was the manner in which the Cougars took their shots. Victoria's shooting was impressive. Anderson's second goal and the scoring efforts by Lupul and Gordon came on drives that probably would have beaten any goaltender.

Anderson hung his other goals past Portland's Randy Ireland with shots that also would have beaten any professional. His third goal, after taking a breakaway pass from Gret Tebbutt, came on one of the prettiest plays of the season.

Unbeaten on home ice this season, the Cougars padded their hold on first place in the Western Division to six point over New Westminster Bruins, the team Victoria faces here Saturday night.

Saturday's game is expected to be Lennartz' final one as temporary coach. He ends a two-week Victoria visit then and will head back to his home in Dauphin, Man.

He'll still be in charge this week, however, as Ginnell heads for Alberta. Ginnell will attend a league meeting Thursday, called to select a WCHL all-star team that will play squads from Russia, Ontario and Quebec during the Christmas season.

In addition, Ginnell plans to do some scouting and also will meet with Stan Swales. A defenceman obtained from Lethbridge last week in a trade for Rick Hendricks, Swales apparently has had second thoughts about pulling out of a forestry class at the University of Alberta to play in Victoria.

In other games Tuesday, Ron Trafford scored all four goals and former Cougar Dan Rogers made his first start for Regina to help the Pats to a 4-4 tie with the Bombers in Flin Flon, and Saskatoon Blades cut loose to defeat Winnipeg Monarchs 11-5.

Barry Sets Record

By The Associated Press

Rick Barry has got to learn to concentrate at the free throw line.

"I had hoped to make 80 or 90 in a row, but I didn't concentrate and then I missed," said Barry, who saw one of his underhand tosses from the free throw line roll off the rim Tuesday night but not before he set a National Basketball Association record of 60 in a row.

Barry's miss late in the fourth quarter came after he made his first eight tries of the game and erased the NBA record of 58 set last season by Houston's Calvin Murphy.

Barry topped all scorers with 33 points Tuesday, leading Golden State Warriors to a 110-102 victory over Seattle SuperSonics. The Warriors clinched it in the fourth quarter when consecutive baskets by rookie Sonny Parker and Charles Dudley and a pair of free throws by Barry made it 96-88 with 4:20 to play.

Slick Watts led Seattle with 25 points. Fred Brown had 16 points for the Sonics, including 10 in the final quarter.

Today's Game Should Clear Soccer Picture

The longest and wackiest playoff session in the history of the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League was expected to be concluded today.

This time it is a solid bet that things will finally be settled. There is no longer room for additional indecision and intrigue because Victoria must have a second team qualified for the provincial championship tournament that starts Thursday on four Victoria fields.

This is how the playoff picture unfolded in the league season:

Oak Bay Bays, winners of the league title by one point over Reynolds Roadrunners, and captors of the playoff crown, have no worries. They are the No. 1 Victoria entry in the 16-team provincial tourney.

Mount Douglas Thistles and the Roadrunners each had a turn at being considered the second Victoria squad to compete for the B.C. title. Both had turns at being disqualified.

Reynolds apparently earned the berth with a 4-1 triumph over Mount Doug in the playoff semi-finals Nov. 8, but the victory was voided because the Runners used an ineligible player.

The game was replayed last Friday and the Thistles came out on top 2-1 and were apparently headed for the provincial event.

It was not to be.

The Thistles, their situation complicated by a mid-season coaching change, had neglected to submit an entry before an extended deadline expired. They were informed Monday that they could not play in the B.C. tourney.

On Monday night, Mount Douglas lost a 3-2 decision to Oak Bay in the playoff final.

At noon Tuesday, coaches of teams in the Greater Victoria league, with six of the 10 in attendance, met to consider alternatives and ruled that Reynolds should play off for the second berth against Spectrum, defeated by Oak Bay in the league semi-finals.

The coaches also decided that the game would be shortened to 70 minutes from the regulation 90 in order to place less physical strain on the team advancing into the B.C. event.

That's the way it was at 10 this morning as Reynolds and Spectrum clashed at Carnarvon Park in an attempt to settle it all.

Kindrachuk Hits On Second Chance

By The Canadian Press

Opportunity knocked twice for Orest Kindrachuk on Tuesday night. The door finally opened the second time.

Kindrachuk, stopped on a breakaway by Detroit goalie Ed Giacomin midway through the third period, scored on a backhander with just 2:05 remaining to snap a scoreless tie and lead Philadelphia Flyers to a 2-0 National Hockey League victory over the Red Wings.

"Sometimes you wonder about this game," Giacomin sighed later. "Kindrachuk walks in on that breakaway, and in previous years that's automatic. So you get by that one and he scores on that little shot of his. I even thought he missed."

The victory, Philadelphia's ninth of the year, moved the Flyers to within six points of New York Islanders in the Patrick Division. The loss kept Detroit mired in last place in the Norris Division with a 4-10-3 mark.

In the only other scheduled game, Cleveland Barons and Los Angeles Kings battled to the second scoreless tie of the NHL season. Cleveland's Garry Simmons and Canada Cup hero Rogie Vachon exchanged key saves at Jack Kent Cooke's Inglewood (Calif.) Forum.

Steady work by defenceman Joe Watson and centre Mel Bridgman, who added a goal into an open net with only seven seconds to go, led to Kindrachuk's goal.

Davis Joins Buccaneers

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers announced Tuesday they have signed running back Anthony Davis, the former all-America at the University of Southern California who bought his way out of the Canadian Football League to rejoin his old boss.

Ron Wolf, the Bues' vice-president of operations, and Davis' agent, Mike Trope of Los Angeles, said they reached agreement on terms of a multi-year contract after a 12-hour series of meetings through the night.

Davis refused to discuss terms of the contract. He will not play with the winless National Football League expansion team until next year.

"Anthony Davis is now a member of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for the 1977 football season," Wolf said at a news conference with Davis, Trope and coach John McKay, who coached Davis at Southern California. "This is one more step in our endeavor to fulfill our commitment to the fans."

Davis, 24, said it was "in the best interests of my career" to buy his way out of his contract with the CFL Toronto Argonauts. He had a reported $1 million, five-year contract and bought his release after only one year. The Argos announced his release on Monday.

"I don't feel my talent was exploited," said Davis. "The whole year, I touched the ball only four times a game from a rushing standpoint.

Howe Reaches New Plateau

By The Canadian Press

Gordie Howe reached another milestone Tuesday in scoring his 100th goal in the World Hockey Association to boost his life-time total to 886 goals.

Howe, 48, scored on a backhand in the third period to provide the insurance goal for Houston Aeros in their 4-2 win over Calgary Cowboys in Houston.

In other WHA games Tuesday, Winnipeg Jets defeated Quebec Nordiques 8-4, Indianapolis Racers beat Cincinnati Stingers 5-3, New England Whalers edged Birmingham Bulls 5-1 and Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Edmonton Oilers 5-2.

The Aeros lengthened their home-ice undefeated string to 10 games as Mark Howe, Paul Popiel and Morris Lukowitch supplemented Gordie Howe's milestone goal.

Richard Lemieux and Warren Miller replied for the Cowboys who extended their winless streak to seven on the road.

In Indianapolis, Gene Peacosh scored twice on powerplays as he made his debut with the Racers after a stint with Edmonton.

Leafs Trip Blues

Maple Leafs, led by a three-goal spree from Rugs Pritchard, upset Chemainus Blues 5-3 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game Tuesday night at Pearkes Arena.

Leafs, who are in fifth place in the six team league, trailed the second-place Blues 2-1 after the first period but were ahead 3-2 going into the final 20 minutes.

Murray Kennett counted twice for Victoria and Dale Cook scored the other goal.

Bill Harwood (2) and Peter Lemon replied for Chemainus.

Dave Maynard blocked 29 shots on the Leaf goal while Chemainus netminder Vic Mallai made 26 saves.

Lemon Gets Sox Post

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Lemon, hard-throwing right-hander who pitched his way into baseball's Hall of Fame, Tuesday was named manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Berger Expects Rodgers Back

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, said Tuesday he believes slotback Johnny Rodgers will be back with the team next season.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's no thought whatsoever of him not playing for us," Berger said in the wake of speculation, fed by statements by coach Marv Levy, that the Alouettes will dump the controversial Heisman Trophy winner.

"But I don't approve of all his antics," Berger added, "and he's not going to be permitted to do all the things he's done in the past."

Meanwhile, Rodgers and running back Andy Hopkins, objects of contention all season, have defended themselves against charges of possessing poor attitudes.

"They think I'm some kind of machine or something," said Hopkins, plagued by a knee injury most of the year. "When I get hurt, just put in oil or something, and put him back out there. This is what I've been doing, just to help the team out, yet they've been jamming me, the press and some team members."

Levy said he will meet Rodgers, this week to discuss his future with the Alouettes but the "ordinary superstar's" chances of convincing the coach he should stay in Montreal appeared slim, until Berger's statement.

"Johnny's action on Friday night was the most unprofessional, bush league thing I've seen as a coach, and I told him so," Levy said of an incident in which Rodgers skipped a team meeting.

On Saturday in Hamilton, the Alouettes lost 23-0 to the Tiger-Cats in the Eastern Football Conference semi-final.

"I fined him heavily," Levy said, confirming that a newspaper report of a $500 fine was correct.

Both Rodgers and Hopkins are accused of loafing by missing practice without adequate reason, and both have denied it.

"They say there's dissension on the team, that Levy has two sets of rules, one for me and Rodgers and one for everybody else," Hopkins said. "Stuff like that makes you wonder if you really belong here or not, you know."

Rodgers said criticism of him increased after quarterback Jimmy Jones and four other players were sent to Hamilton for Hopkins, a 1000-yard rusher this season.

"I can't see how it always just seems that it's the black players who are getting jammed."

"Our black-white thing, our dissension thing, comes strictly from racist people in the press," Rodgers said. "It doesn't come from the inside. We're not having that many problems inside."

But Rodgers said he believed Jones was traded because he is black, and that general-manager Bob Geary was primarily responsible.

CAHILL FOR JACKSON?

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says it has learned from reliable sources that Toronto Argonauts majority owner Bill Hodgson plans to fire head coach Russ Jackson and replace him with former Argo coach Leo Cahill.

Hodgson was not immediately available for comment.

Argos general manager Dick Shatto said "No decision has been made in that area."

Jackson has three years remaining on a five-year contract.

Cahill, now working for a Toronto radio station, was fired by former Argos owner John Bassett in 1972 after six seasons with the club.

BRAVES DOMINATE

LAKE COWICHAN — Saanich Braves moved four points ahead of runner-up Esquimalt Legion by mauling Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking 15-2 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Tuesday at Lake Cowichan Arena.

Brent Patterson bashed in four goals to set the scoring pace for Braves while Dale Ewasiuk added three goals. Murray McLaren and Scott Connors scored twice each and single tallies were contributed by Bill Adkin, Ed Beauchamin, Ron Jobson and Lorne Halme.

Ron McDougall and Norm Lobb replied for Truckers, who were outshot, 77-15.

Doug Bodug was an extremely capable performer in the Lake Cowichan net while Mitch Lacelle wasn't tested nearly as severely at the other end of the ice.

Canada's Salmon Scheme Best Possible Approach

Canada's desire to enhance its declining stocks of Pacific salmon isn't unique, but the multifaceted approach envisioned under the joint federal-provincial salmonid enhancement scheme is perhaps the best in many ways.

Dr. Kees Groot of the Pacific Biological Station in Nanaimo recently compiled a review of what other Pacific rim countries were doing in the way of enhancement.

Washington, Oregon and Alaska in the United States have each responded to depletion of salmon stocks in a different way.

Washington has an extensive system of hatcheries, spawning and rearing channels, holding ponds and pen-rearing facilities — essentially an artificial approach. But the state fisheries department does keep streams free of obstructions and maintain fish ladders, fishways and other structures to help natural propagation.

As part of a concerted effort to boost the commercial catch of chum, pink and coho salmon which started in 1975, attempts will be made to develop hatchery-produced chums that can be fished separately from the wild stocks. It is also hoped the timing of the return of hatchery coho can be adjusted for the same purpose.

Oregon also relies heavily on hatcheries but one goal of their 10-year program, started in 1968, is to establish natural, self-sustaining spawning runs of chinook and coho salmon as well as steelhead in the Willamette River system.

In Alaska, a department was set up in 1971 in response to a dramatic decline in the annual salmon harvest, from 100 million fish in the 1930s to less than 25 million in recent years.

There are many similarites between the approaches of Canada and Alaska. Both have set their targets of restoring salmon runs to historic levels within 15 years and each anticipates an investment of $300 million to meet this goal.

But there the similarities end.

Canada is still carefully assessing the potentials for enhancement while Alaska has already decided that the bulk of the state's $300 million will be committed to state-run hatcheries and a further loan fund of $200 million will be made available to finance privately-operated non-profit hatcheries. The balance of the state funds will be used to rehabilitate damaged streams and improve management of wild stocks.

Alaska hopes to switch the commercial fishing effort to hatchery fish in order to rebuild natural spawning systems without extensive fisheries closures.

The process of privately-operated hatcheries could have originated in Japan, where this method of enhancement dates back 100 years. Fishermen's associations in Japan operate up to 50 hatcheries, the federal government has 41 and state governments own three to five.

Only 10 per cent of the salmon entering rivers on Hokkaido spawn naturally and the annual investment of $3.3 million in hatchery operations yields an annual catch valued at $164 million. The main concentration is on chums.

A substantial hatchery program has also been instigated in the Soviet Union on Sakhalin Island, the Kurile Islands and along the Amur River. Heavy ocean fishing depleted pink salmon catches to 22 to 33 per cent of former levels by the 1960s and the Soviets responded with the largest hatchery system for pinks in the North Pacific.

Hatcheries, however, have some serious drawbacks. Hatchery stocks could stand up to 95 per cent exploitation, which would be disasterous to wild runs. Other factors, such as accidents to hatchery equipment, disease epidemics involving both hatchery and natural stocks and the possibility that interbreeding might alter homing instincts suggest it might not be a good idea to place too great an emphasis on factory-produced fish.

It's simply a matter of following the old adage of not placing all your eggs in one basket.

Instead of relying on a single technique or group of related techniques, our own federal and provincial fisheries managers are in the process of evaluating all known scientific possibilities as well as exploring a few untried approaches to salmonid enhancement.

In the long run, it will likely pay off.

SCORPIONS SCUTTLED

Plans of Victoria Scorpions to enjoy New Zealand sunshine in their winter basketball season were jolted Tuesday.

Scheduled to represent Canada in the New Zealand Games at Christchurch, Scorpions were informed by Doug Ruttan of the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association that the games have been cancelled because of poor promotion.

Defeated finalists in the 1976 Canadian senior "A" men's basketball championship, Scorpions had planned to be in New Zealand during the last two weeks of January.

Team sponsor Ian Scott-Moncrieff said he would call the New Zealand consulate in an attempt to make other arrangements.

Munson Wins MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — For catcher Thurman Munson of New York Yankees, capturing the 1976 American League Most Valuable Player award was the culmination of a fantastic season.

Munson, 29, was named winner of the award Tuesday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America in a landslide. He easily outdistanced runnerup George Brett, third baseman of Kansas City Royals, by 87 points.

In leading the Yankees to their first pennant in 12 years, Munson hit .302, belted 17 homers and batted in 105 runs.

The right-handed swinger collected 18 of the 24 first-place votes and a total of 304 points from the 24-man committee of writers. He received four votes for second and two for third.

He became the first Yankee to gain the accolade since Elston Howard, a current Yankee coach, in 1963. Howard, who earlier in his career played with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, also was the last catcher to win.

Brett received 217 points, including two first-place votes. He won the league batting title with a .333 average.

Third in the balloting was centre fielder Mickey Rivers of the Yankees with 179½ points, including one first-place vote. Rivers batted .312 and had 43 stolen bases.

Munson said at a news conference Tuesday evening: "This is the greatest individual honor I've ever received in baseball. I'll try harder to win it again next season.

To Curb Rough Play

Violence in hockey is again creating worries.

This time it is the kind of hockey played on grass that is troubled by rough tactics.

Directors of the Vancouver Island Field Hockey Association at a meeting this week expressed "grave concern" over the increase in rough play during league games this season. From this concern came a unanimously-passed motion calling for stricter disciplinary action against offending players, up to expulsion from the league.

Officials have also agreed to split the league into two divisions of five teams each for the second half of the season with the clubs regrouping for a knockout tournament at the end of the campaign.

Tigers finished on top in the first round of competition, holding a four-point margin over Rebels I and Oak Bay although their victory streak was snapped after seven games last weekend when they were held to a 2-2 draw by fourth-place Castaways.

Oak Bay climbed into the second-place deadlock by beating Rebels III while Rebels I were struggling to a 1-1 stalemate with Marketmen.

In Sunday's other game, Kangonis bounced Rebel II 3-1.

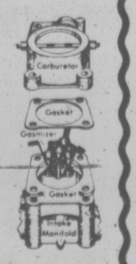
3B, 4B and 7B gasmizer



The 4B Gasmizer is a simple, effective device that significantly reduces pollution and conserves gas. It utilizes the normal engine vacuum as its principal motive power, developing shock waves which are created by sonic frequency vibrations and induced into the fuel-air mixture as it leaves the carburetor. These shock waves materially aid the atomization of the fuel-air mixture thus allowing for more efficient combustion to reduce pollution and conserve fuel.

John Gets the 'Hutch'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy John, whose ability to pitch after radical arm surgery even surprised his surgeons, is the winner of this year's Hutch Award.

The 33-year-old Los Angeles Dodgers southpaw pitcher is the 12th winner of the award, given annually by major league sports writers and broadcasters in memory of Fred Hutchinson, who was managing baseball's Cincinnati Reds when he died of cancer in 1964.

John posted a 10-10 record, pitching 207 innings for the Dodgers in 1976 after 1½ years of inactivity caused by a ruptured ligament in his left elbow July 17, 1974.

Surgeons used a tendon removed from his right elbow in the delicate operation that reconstructed his left arm in September, 1974.

The award is voted to a major league player "who best exemplifies the character, competitive instincts and desire of Hutchinson."

The Hutch Award project gives an annual $2,000 scholarship grant to a medical student or researcher engaged in cancer study.

THE END FOR ENDER

EAST BERLIN (Reuter) — East German swimming star Kornelia Ender, who won four gold medals and one silver at the 1976 Montreal Olympics and who broke 23 world records during her career, has retired from competition.

BROOD MARE RECORD PRICE $1 MILLION

LEXINGTON, Ky., (AP) — Queen Sucree, the dam of 1974 Kentucky Derby winner Cannonade, brought a world brood-mare record price of $1 million at the fourth session of the 33rd Keeneland November Breeding Stock Sale on Tuesday night.

Queen Sucree, a little-raced daughter of two-time European Horse of the Year, Ribot, and in foal to Bold Bidder, was bought by Ann Trimble of Lexington, Ky., as agent for an unknown buyer.

Queen Sucree, consigned by John Olin, was only the second horse ever to bring $1 million at public auction, topped only by the $1.5-million price paid for a yearling son of Secretariat in Keeneland's Selected Yearling Sale last July.

Amateur Boxers Fight Saturday

Victoria Athletic Association will hold its first amateur boxing card at the club headquarters, 1600 Quadra at Pandora Saturday night starting at 7:30 p.m.

There are 12 bouts scheduled, with Victoria boys being matched against boxers from Nanaimo, Powell River and the Hastings Club of Vancouver in 11 of the fights.

Most of the matches will be in the novice class. The feature event will be between Wayne Crowe, defeated in the Canadian championships last year by Chris Clarke, who qualified for the Canadian Olympic team, and Barry Creswell, a promising puncher from the Nanaimo club.

Open to the public, a clinic for officials will be conducted on Sunday morning at 10:30 by a group of B.C. Amateur Boxing Association referees and judges.

Victoria Athletic Association boxing workouts are held at the club gymnasium, 852 Mason Street, on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. under the direction of head coach Mike Caird and assistants Brian Zelley and Lou Budjoso.

Trilecs Down Stevens

Trilec Installation took a narrow 27-25 half-time lead and then went on to defeat Stevens Interiors 63-48 in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League action Tuesday night at Lambrick Park Junior High School.

The win gave Trilec a share of second place with Oak Bay.

Bruce English was the only Trilec player to hit double figures, contributing 13 points to a well-balanced attack in which 11 of the 12 players scored at least two points.

Jim Cunningham and Mike Wallace led Stevens with eight points each.

TRILEC (63): Bruce English 13, Charlie Davis 8, Darrell Johnson 6, Doug Callbeck 6, Dave English 6, Gord Gummer 6, Kevin Worth 6, Steve Pescod 4, Bruce Lubinich 4, Thad Newman 2, Rick Reece 2, Steve Dunbar.
STEVENS (48): Jim Cunningham 8, Mike Wallace 8, Bryan Grant 6, Bob Lee 6, Royal Edmondson 4, Dave Boddy 3, Dwayne Robinson 3, Steve Hambleton 3, Dave Tooby, Graham MacKay.

Japan Advances

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Favored Japan wound up with a 3-2 victory over South Korea Monday in the Eastern Zone Davis Cup tennis quarter-finals after capturing the doubles match. The Koreans won the final two singles matches.

Japan will play India in New Delhi in early December.

Super Salaries: Pros Must Make It While They Can

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

(EDITORS NOTE: This is the second in a three-part series on the super salaries of professional athletes. Today—How the players feel about their market value.)

In the Babe Ruth Story, actor William Bendix promised a critically ill boy a home run. Anything can happen in Hollywood, so when the Bambino came through with his homer, the movie cameras showed the boy perking up. And, of course, he went on to live happily ever after.

Baseball players, or sports figures in general, are not in the business of saving or protecting lives. They may make the public stand up and cheer or provide excitement and entertainment for millions of people. This, too, is a public service.

But they don't save people's lives.

Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher Doc Medich leaped into the stands this season and tried to revive a heart attack victim. The man died but, had Medich succeeded, it would have been because of his medical school training, not his pitching ability.

Assuming that saving lives is one of the most admirable things a human can do, why does the average professional athlete make more money than the average doctor? Why is the average basketball salary nearly $110,000, when the average salary for policemen and firemen is under $15,000?

"If we had a completely rational system, then I think it would be legitimate for people to compare salaries," says Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players' Association. "If the majority agreed to base the system of salaries on society's needs, then the top priorities should be for cancer research and the like. . . .

"But we don't have that kind of system. Our system is a hodgepodge. It's based on all sorts of rational and irrational things. If a particular skill is in short supply or it is vital to society's needs, then there will be high compensation. . . ."

Profesional athletes, Miller said, are merely the beneficiaries of North American society and its economic system. They didn't create it; they only profit from it.

"If a club thinks a player is worth $1.5 million to play, he has to be worth it," said Los Angeles Dodgers baseball player Steve Garvey, who just completed a two-year contract worth $220,000. "No organization is going to pay more than a player is worth."

The professional sports owners feel athletes have a marketable talent, and they pay them accordingly. Some can afford it better than others.

Roy Boe of New York Nets said he couldn't afford to renegotiate Julius Erving's contract. So he sold him to Philadelphia '76ers for $3 million. Philadelphia now is paying Erving $3 million over five years.

"A player has to try and get whatever the traffic will bear, and make the most of his earning capability while he has it," says Erving.

The average career in the National Football League is five years. It's five years for baseball players, six years for the National Basketball Association and nine years in the National Hockey League.

"I'm not guaranteed anything for next year," says Roger Staubach of Dallas Cowboys, who makes an estimated $100,000 a year. "There's no question that we are in a short-term business as far as a career is concerned."

Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota Vikings is probably the richest quarterback ever. He lives in a $400,000 house in Atlanta and leases a lakefront home in suburban Minneapolis during the football season.

Through various investments he became a millionaire in 1971 and his net worth is estimated at $7 million. When Tarkenton was an NFL rookie in 1961, he made $12,500. He now is working on a three-year contract estimated at $1 million.

"Who is to determine what any group of people make? We make what the market bears," Tarkenton said. "Should an athlete make a half-million dollars a year or should Elvis Presley make a quarter-million dollars a night to sing?"

"I don't think athletes are overpaid, particularly golfers," said Arnold Palmer, whose career earnings on the U.S. golf tour are nearly $2 million.

"In every other sport, except maybe tennis, the player has a contract. He's gonna get that much," Palmer said. "In golf, you're paid solely on the basis of your performance."

VICTORIA DRIVER TOPS CLASS LIST

Graham Jones of the Victoria Motor Sports Club captured first place over-all in the "D" improved sedan class of the International Conference of Sports Car Clubs season-end standings.

Approximately 450 drivers from Alaska, B.C., Alberta, Washington, Idaho, Oregon and California compete in a total of 13 races throughout the Pacific Northwest during the ICSCC season.

Several other Victoria competitors also did well.

John Kendrew took second in two classes — "D" improved sedan and "F" sports racing—while other runners-up were Gordon Munroe (Formula Atlantic) and Bob Slater ("G" production sports cars).

John Storr finished fourth in the Formula Atlantic class and Harry Pillar was fifth in "D" sports racing.

Horrigan Rink Leads

Tim Horrigan's rink maintained its lead in the Carling O'Keefe men's super league of curling at the Racquet Club Tuesday night with a 7-5 victory over Ted Jurista's foursome. It was Horrigan's fifth win against one loss.

Bob Gallaugher is in second place one game behind by virtue of a 7-6 victory over Steve Skillings. In other games Keith Dagg defeated Bob Hawkes 8-4, and Len Becker won from Gord Paterson 9-5.

HOW TO FIX A WHITE ELEPHANT

It sounds like it should be big and white and wild. But strangely, a White Elephant is short and white and smooth. So smooth, and so delicious, in fact, that you'll hardly know that it has 2 oz. of liquor in it. Like all elephants, a White Elephant should always be treated with respect.

Here's all you do to mix a White Elephant: pour 1 oz. Smirnoff, 1 oz. white creme de cacao and 1 oz. milk into a short glass with ice. Stir. And enjoy the little alabaster behemoth.

Act of Contrition . . . Not Apology: PM

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A speech he delivered during a recent trip to Japan was not an apology for treatment Japanese-Canadians received during the Second World War, Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

The prime minister made the statement in the Commons and later Ivan Head, his foreign affairs adviser who wrote the speech, said "it was an acknowledgement of an injustice, an act of contrition, if you will, but in no way an apology to the government of Japan."

Trudeau told Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) the speech, which mentioned intolerance and denial of civil rights when the Japanese were moved from the Pacific Coast after Japan entered the war, was a recitation of "not very glorious facts."

News reports of that reference called it an apology.

Reporters with the prime minister's party at the time said Tuesday they were told by Richard O'Hagan that the speech was written by Head, and was intended as an apology.

O'Hagan is director of communications in the prime minister's office. He could not be reached for comment.

Leggatt said in the Commons that Trudeau should apologize to the Japanese Canadians themselves and offer financial compensation to the most severe cases of hardship caused by the government's confiscation policy during the war.

Veterans and other members of the public have criticized the speech in letters to newspapers, but this was the first time Trudeau was attacked in the Commons for his statements.

Leggatt also asked if the prime minister could offer anything "more tangible" than an apology since the Supreme Court of Canada has dismissed claims by Japanese Canadians against "that injustice."

The top court ruled several years ago that the federal claims commission which decided on rates of compensation for land, fishboats and other property confiscated under the policy, was legally constituted, leaving the claimants without legal redress.

Outside the House Leggatt said he doesn't want to reopen "this whole chapter of Canadian history," but that he thinks most Canadians now would support cash payments as compensation in the most obvious cases of injustice under the war-time policy.

HUMANE TRAP BILL SENT TO COMMITTEE

OTTAWA (CP) — A private member's bill encouraging more humane trapping methods was sent Tuesday to the Commons fisheries committee for additional study.

The bill, submitted by Donald Munro (PC — Esquimalt-Saanich) was withdrawn despite almost unanimous agreement among Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party members that current trapping techniques are "barbaric and inhumane."

Despite Munro's assertion that he was not trying "to destroy the Canadian trapping industry," Wally Firth (NDP — Northwest Territories) said such legislation would substantially increase the expenses of trappers already earning only a marginal living.

Abbott Blasts Credit 'Lure'

TORONTO (CP) — Anthony Abbott, federal consumer affairs minister, said Tuesday that loan advertisements by banks and finance companies often are misleading.

Abbott was defending the Borrowers and Depositors Protection Bill — introduced in the Commons last month — in a speech to the Canadian Advertising Advisory Baord.

The bill tries to eliminate the "lure of easy credit," he said.

If the bill is passed, loan advertisements will have to include more information and this will increase competition among financial institutions, Abbott added.

He said the bill will give more protection against unfair interest rates, approve new means for police to apprehend loan sharks and standardize the calculation of interest on bank deposits and credit transactions.

The board also was told that complaints about children's advertising have almost disappeared since the Advertising Standards Council —an industry-supported regulation agency—started a rigorous clearance procedure.

Lavish Government Waste Hit by Tory

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government was criticized Tuesday for diverting money from important programs while lavish waste continues in other areas.

"Government attempts at restraint are a joke," said Gordon Towers (PC-Red Deer) during debate on a government spending restraint bill first introduced about 11 months ago.

While the government spends wastefully on Transport Minister Otto Lang's air travel, $20 million in manpower training was to be cut and $50 million in payments to farmers through the grain stabilization law was in jeopardy.

Victor Railton (L-Welland) said the $50 million would merely be deferred and farmers would receive interest payments.

Many of the restraints bill's proposals—steps to scrap the Company of Young Canadians, end the Opportunities for Youth program, do away with Information Canada and block increases in family allowances — are already in effect.

The bill must pass before such measures can legally be implemented.

But the government ended the programs in advance merely by cutting off the funds to operate them.

Railton defended the record of the Trudeau administration, saying unemployment and gross national product figures compared favorably to other western countries.

The Liberal administration was committed to cutting expenses, despite Opposition and media attempts to misrepresent the government, Railton said amid frequent hecklings by Towers.

Les Benjamin (NDP-Regina-Lake Centre) said that removing transport subsidies which aid grain and flour exporters, as suggested in the bill, would involve shifting costs far greater than the amount of the subsidies.

Benjamin said the user-pay concept advocated by the government to eliminate freight and travel subsidies makes little sense in any country, least of all a country as far-flung and thinly populated as Canada.

LeBlanc Vows Study Of Runway Scheme

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc has promised a public discussion on the environemntal consequences of the proposed third runway at Vancouver International Airport before the federal transport department makes any decision on the project.

He gave the assurance in a letter to oJhn Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) who called the minister's statement Tuesday "a major breakthrough."

Fraser, who has raised the issue in the Commons, noted that a 1973 report of the airport planing committee, including representatives of the federal government, the city of Vancouver, the Greater Vancouver Regional District, the aviation industry and the public, found that the transport department hadn't made a case for a third runway.

However, Transport Minister Otto Lang at that time proposed a shorter runway which wouldn't extend into the Fraser River estuary and declared that his department and not the airport planning committee would make the decision.

1. MILEAGE
The Dodge D100 rates competitively on mileage with any other North American full-size pickup. Based on the results of tests approved by Transport Canada, a '77 Dodge D100 powered by the popular 318 V8 with automatic is rated at 25 miles per gallon on the highway, 17 in the city. You can maximize economy by ordering the optional overdrive manual transmission and the 225 Slant Six, a combination that delivers 32 mpg on the highway and 23 in the city. The actual mileage you get will depend on the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your truck's condition and optional equipment.
2. PRICE
The Dodge D100 is one of North America's lowest-priced full-size pickups. Did you know that? If you know trucks, you'll know all about the way Dodge builds a smooth riding truck. And how it offers passenger car options like automatic, AM/FM radio, even air conditioning. Now you know Dodge trucks have got it on price too.
3. PAYLOAD
The Dodge D100 has the biggest standard payload of any full-size pickup of the Big Three. The kind of payload that makes small work of the biggest loads. Without beefing it up one bit, you can haul off a whopping 1,510 pounds. With optional equipment, you can go up to 2,535 pounds payload on a D100 pickup. Not bad, eh? Getting to be best is getting to be a habit with Dodge. Catch the habit.

The Dodge D100 shown is equipped with the optional Adventurer SE package, styled road wheels, white side wall tires and pickup box grip rails.

Ottawa Probing Chances Of Pipeline Cost Jumps

OIL REPORT DELAY BY NEB

OTTAWA (FP) — The National Energy Board's third annual oil report, to be used as the basis for determining how much more quickly oil exports to the U.S. should be phased out, is not expected to be completed until at least March, 1977, four months later than usual, according to the NEB.

One consequence of the delay will be that U.S. importers will likely receive higher quantities of oil from Canada during the first few months of 1977 than they would had the latest NEB report on domestic oil productibility been finished by now.

Since the future prospects of reversing the downward trend of domestic oil production have actually worsened in the past year, the new NEB oil report is expected to call for an even faster phase out of oil exports to the United States than the phase-out built into the formula used to determine 1976 oil export levels.

While initial oil export levels during 1977 will likely be based on the 1976 formula, any over-export as measured under the new 1977 export formula would likely be compensated for in exports during later months in 1977.

By JEFF CARUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government has quietly launched its own independent study of the likelihood and the extent of cost overruns which could be expected if a Mackenzie River valley natural gas pipeline is allowed to proceed.

According to government officials the study is essentially designed to determine the extent of financial risks and obligations which the government might have to assume if it is asked for as now expected and grants, government guarantees for a northern gas pipeline.

Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. of Toronto, proponent of a $10-billion Canada-U.S. pipeline, has told the National Energy Board it will need two kinds of government guarantees to be able to finance its project: government completion guarantees, whereby the U.S. and Canadian governments would provide extra funds to cover cost overruns; and government interruption insurance, to prevent the company from going broke during a prolonged interruption of service. Both would be "all risks" guarantees.

The cost overrun study is being undertaken by FENCO Consultants Ltd. of Toronto under a $200,000 contract from the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

The study will provide the federal government with an independent analysis of the possible cost escalations under a number of scenarios for the three northern gas pipeline projects now being reviewed by the National Energy Board: the Arctic Gas pipeline; the competing Foothills PipeLines Ltd. of Calgary "all-Canadian" Mackenzie pipeline; and the AlCan Highway pipeline to carry only Alaskan gas across Canada to southern U.S. markets.

As a part of the cost overrun analysis, FENCO consultants will also be studying whether the construction time tables and construction techniques proposed in the three applications are reasonable and feasible, since these two matters will have a major impact on final costs.

In commissioning the independent study, the government has in mind the sometimes drastic cost overruns associated with such recent major capital projects as the Trans-Alaska "Alyeska" oil pipeline where costs jumped from $900-million to $9-billion, the Olympic stadium in Montreal, and the recently-completed Sarnia - Montreal oil pipeline.

Anti-Pipeline Group Scoffs at Aid Pitch

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A bid by a multi-national pipeline consortium for government financial aid shows its proposed northern pipeline is not economic, says the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee.

The committee, a public interest group based in Ottawa, says in a brief that the pipeline should be delayed until it can be financed on its own merits.

The brief has been filed with the commission studying the impact of pipeline construction on the North. The commission, headed by Mr. Justic Thomas Berger of the British Columbia Supreme Court, is in the final week of a 20-month hearing.

The brief refers to requests made by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. to the federal government for financial assistance, if needed, to go ahead with an $8-billion pipeline from the North.

"Arctic Gas has announced it cannot finance the pipeline without government subsidy. This is another way of saying that the project is not economic at this time."

As far as the committee is concerned, the issue of a pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley is dead because Mackenzie delta gas is not now needed in Canada, the project is too costly and "its social and environmental impacts are intolerable."

The committee and groups representing northern natives are expected to make their presentations to the commission today.

In its final argument to the commission Tuesday, Foothills Pipelines Ltd., the second applicant for a northern pipeline, said construction should not begin until native land claims are settled.

To do otherwise would raise hostility among the local people, said company lawyer Reg Gibbs.

Chicken Board Plan Raked

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition to a proposed national chicken marketing agency continued here during the final day of public hearings Tuesday.

Loblaw Companies Ltd., a major food chain, and The Retail Council of Canada Food Division, presented briefs arguing against such a move, saying costs to consumers would increase.

Under the proposal, a national agency would co-ordinate the activities of the nine provincial chicken marketing boards by regulating production and sales in the industry.

The Loblaws brief estimated that retail chicken prices would rise by at least 40 per cent because, under the proposal, access to imported chickens from the United States would be cut off.

The Retail Council of Canada, representing most major food retailers and many wholesalers, said in its brief that the free market system in the U.S. had produced retail prices identical this year to those in 1930.

The price for chickens in nine U.S. cities earlier this month averaged 35 cents a pound, compared with 74 cents a pound in Vancouver and 59 cents a pound in Toronto, the brief said.

Blockade Threat

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Chief Isaac Mandamin of the Whitedog Indian reserve has warned that if the federal and provincial governments don't solve the mercury pollution problem in this area, Indians will block roads to tourist camps next spring.

Last July, reserve residents blocked a road leading to tourist camps in the area for several weeks, trying to keep sports fishermen out of the area.

Plans to make the area around the mercury-contaminated English and Wabigoon Rivers system a national park were abandoned Tuesday by Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand.

Chief Mandamin said a park would "interfere with our treaty rights."

The Indians would be unable to hunt within the park, trap, harvest wild rice or cut timber, he said.

Bill Fobister, project co-ordinator at the Grassy Narrows reserve said Tuesday 400 members of the Whitedog and Grassy Narrows reserves signed a petition opposing the park and sent it to Ottawa this week.

An Indian affairs ministry spokesman in Ottawa said Tuesday he could not determine whether or not the petition had arrived.

Parks Canada and Ontario ministry of natural resources officials met with the Kenora area Indians last week and heard their views on the idea of a park.

"If we had accepted the park, we would have let the government and the polluter off the hook," said Fobister.

"Each one of the band members on each reserve is entitled to compensation."

The pollution on the river system was traced to the Reed Ltd. paper mill here.

John Reed, (L — Kenora-Rainy River), said Monday that the only group to support the park was the 'Kenora District Camp Owners' Association.

No commercial fishing is allowed in the area 300 miles west of Thunder Bay although sports fishing is permitted.

16% Gas Hike Due in March

British Columbia consumers probably will be hit with a 16 per cent increase in the price of natural gas on March 1.

Energy Minister Jack Davis said in a statement Tuesday the price of natural gas in British Columbia will go up in two stages.

"Field prices will go up by 30 cents per thousand cubic feet (MCF) on Jan. 1, 1977. Two months later, on March 1, 1977, the wholesale price paid by B.C. Hydro, Inland Natural Gas and other B.C. distributors, will go up an average of 24 cents to 96 cents per mcf," he said.

The increases are in line with recommendations proposed by the B.C. Energy Commission in a recent report. The difference is the date on which the increases will take effect.

Davis said B.C. Hydro probably would pass the increases along to the consumer.

The report had recommended that the field price go up in steps beginning Nov. 1, and the price to B.C. distributors go up on Jan. 1, 1977.

But Davis said these price increases were delayed so as to minimize their impact on B.C. consumers this winter.

Davis also said that while field prices will be raised by 30 cents per mcf to 85 cents for "new gas" and 65 cents for "old gas," a large part of this increase will be paid out of corporation income tax.

"We are doing away with the old system whereby the province collected the corporation tax and turned it over to the federal government. From now on our B.C. producers will be paying their income taxes to Ottawa the same way everyone else does," he said.

B.C. Energy Commission president John Ludgate said old gas is that which was on stream before Nov. 1, 1974, and new gas is that discovered after that date.

Ludgate said B.C. consumers still would be paying less for their gas than in many other parts of Canada and the United States.

He said consumers in Seattle and Toronto pay about $4.50 mcf for their natural gas, compared to the 96 cents British Columbia customers will pay as of March 1, 1977.

$2.1M Tab For Bridges

Brittain Steel Ltd. of New Westminister has been awarded contracts worth $2.1 million for the construction of two bridges on Vancouver Island.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said construction at Englishman River, near Parksville, and the Salmon River, 40 miles north of Campbell River, will begin as soon as contracts are let for the bridge foundations.

Work on the acutal bridges is expected to take six to seven months.

The Englishman River bridge will be 497 feet long and the Salmon River bridge 548 feet.

Killer Seeks Riverview Release

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lawyer of a man held in Riverview Psychiatric Hospital since 1965 for the murder of two Nanaimo young people told a British Columbia Supreme Court judge the provincial cabinet is acting arbitrarily and unlawfully in refusing to free his client.

Lawyer George Macintosh filed a writ of habeas corpus seeking the release of Ronald Eugene Ingram, 48, who shot and killed two young people in what became known as the Nanamo Lover's Lane Murder in 1962.

He was found not guilty by reason of insanity and has been held since 1965, except for two escapes, on a lieutenant-governor's warrant.

Mr. Justice Ken Meredith reserved decision on the application, in which Macintosh said cabinet's refusal to free Ingram amounts to "arbitrary detention" and is therefore "unlawful."

Under the criminal code, the cabinet may discharge an accused found to be insane if it feels his release "is in the best interests of the accused and not contrary to the interest of the public."

Crown counsel Dwight Whitson argued that the cabinet had not refused to release Ingram, it had simply "not expressed any further pleasure" in the case.

Macintosh told the court Ingram had appeared before a provincial review board five times and on three occasions the board recommended his release.

Macintosh said Ingram escaped for four days in May, 1974, but turned himself in. Frustrated at the cabinet's refusal to release him, Ingram escaped again in August, 1975, and was recaptured by police eight months later, Macintosh said. A charge of escaping lawful custody was stayed by the Crown.

FORGERY LAID TO ALDERMAN

RICHMOND (CP) — Alderman Robert Hobbis was charged Tuesday with obtaining credit through false pretences, forgery and uttering a forged document.

Crown prosecutor Bill Herdy said the charges stem from airline tickets obtained in 1973 from CP Air for a California vacation.

Ald. Hobbis said some people did not wish to see him re-elected Saturday.

"These alleged offences occurred three years ago," said Hobbis. "Why have they been laid just four days before the municipal election?

"It just smacks of a conspiracy at all levels."

Kicking Drunk Admitted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city police constable told a British Columbia Supreme Court jury Tuesday that the man accused of killing Charlie Russell, 65, in the city jail's drunk tank, admitted kicking the victim.

Constable Peter Parleviet, testifying at the murder trial of Freddy Joe, said he went into the tank about midnight on April 1 to release one of the prisones when he noticed an old man lying injured on the floor.

Constable Parleviet said he tried to revive the man in the cell, obtained no response, and sent him to hospital in an ambulance.

Th officer said Russell's face showed a serids of parallel lines resembling the print of a shoe sole. Grooves in Joe's soles showed the same pattern as the grooves on the victim's face.

"I asked 'why did you kick him' and he said 'he put his pants down on me (made a homosexual advance) so I kicked him twice;' " said Constable Parlevliet.

Russell suffered serious brain damage in the beating and died 11 weeks later in hospital without regaining consciousness.

Province Urged To Aid Salmon

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Several speakers raised concerns about provincial involvement in a proposed $300 milllion salmon enhancement program when the federal inquiry held a hearing here Tuesday.

Allan Sheppard, a member of a fish dealers' association, told inquiry chairman Glenn Sinclair, he was "concerned about the low profile of the provincial government in the announced program, considering their critical part in controlling the fresh water and land adjacent to streams and rivers."

Sheppard and other speakers pointed to the need for a provincial minister of fisheries.

Bob Reeve, a commercial fisherman, said "the program can't come too soon" because salmon enhancement is needed immediately.

Another fisherman asked Sinclair if the federal fisheries department would still consider enhancing streams in this west coast area "when faced with the possibility of oil tankers going up and down the coast all the time."

Teachers Settle

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Teachers in the Prince George School District have ratified a contract that will increase pay in all teacher salary classifications by eight per cent, Owen Corcoran, president of the district's teachers' association, said Tuesday. He said the agreement still was subject to approval by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

Ruling Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice D. E. Andrews of the British Columbia Supreme Court said Tuesday that he has reserved decision on a damage action by the Lower Nicola Indian Band against the provincial government. The band has alleged the provincial highways department was going to widen the Merritt-Savona Highway through band property without the approval of the band or federal authorities.

Man Killed

COQUITLAM (CP) — A man was killed Monday when he was hit by a car while walking along the Trans-Canada Highway to get gas for his car. Police withheld his name.

Woman Dies

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A Vancouver area woman died Tuesday after a two-car collision about 100 miles northeast of here in the Pine Pass area. RCMP said a male passenger in the same car as the dead woman was in serious condition in hospital. Two occupants of the other car suffered minor injuries. No names were released.

Industrial Development Chief Urged

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell said today he supports in principle a Victoria Chamber of Commerce proposal that a full-time industrial development commissioner be appointed for this area.

He said the search for industrial sites must be co-ordinated if this area hopes to attract new plants — and the jobs they create.

Campbell will meet Thursday with executive members of the chamber to discuss the proposal.

In principle, he said, he could support the proposal as long as the person appointed was an employee either of the Capital Regional District or of the provincial government.

He said the CRD planning department, which now consists of seven full-time professional planners plus one working part time, could be expanded to include this extra employee.

"From an administrative viewpoint, it would be a simple matter to have this employee working through and with the planning department. It would be up to the various municipalities in the Capital Regional District whether they wanted funds to be made available for this purpose."

As an alternative, he said, the provincial government's department of economic development might be persuaded to appoint an industrial development officer to act on a regional basis.

Campbell said he believes the provincial government operates industrial development projects only on a province-wide basis at the present time but might agree to have an official work for this region.

"This would remove the burden of costs from the local municipalities."

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has campaigned for a full-time industrial development officer, saying this area has lost many jobs because businessmen can not get answers on potential sites and markets from a central source.

Jeremy McCall, chamber economic development director, said businessmen spend three or four weeks trying to get information in this area and give up in frustration because no one seems to have the answers. A boat-building plant was lost when a Washington State company held three weeks of meetings with various officials and businessmen here and still could not get an answer, McCall said.

Campbell agreed industry promotion should be co-ordinated but added that the person appointed might encounter "terrible problems."

For example, he said, there is the shortage of industrial land. Any attempt to get land rezoned for industrial use meets heated opposition from nearby residents.

"The feeling seems to be unanimous that everyone wants industries in Victoria but nobody wants them near where they live."

In addition to the political pressures, there is a squeeze on land space because of the agricultural land freeze, Campbell said. Many choice industrial sites can not be used because of these regulations.

And finally, the industrial development officer would be under tremendous pressure from municipalities when the question of site selection was on the agenda.

"Municipalities tend to be very competitive on these things. That is why it would be better for the industrial development officer to be an offical of the Capital Regional District or the province rather than any single municipality. But eventually there could be a battle on the question of the site."

Cowichan Ballot Validity Queried

DUNCAN — A government-appointed committee investigating re-alignment of municipal boundaries in the Cowichan Valley was told Tuesday its proposed three-way referendum ballot may be invalid.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, in a letter to the committee, said Section 10 of the Municipal Act, under which the vote will be conducted, does not suggest anything other than a single issue question.

The minister's opinion follows an October request by the committee for permission to hold a referendum asking whether residents favor one municipality, two municipalities on a revenue-sharing basis or the existing structure.

They agreed any question receiving more than 50 per cent of the votes cast would indicate the decision of the people.

If none of the three questions received 50 per cent or one receiving the least number of votes would be dropped and a ballet would be held within 30 days on the remaining questions.

But Curtis questions the legality of the selective ballot in his letter.

He added he would seek guidance from the attorney-general.

The area under consideration for boundary realignment includes the City of Duncan, North Cowichan, Saltair, south of the Davis Lagoon and the Eagle Heights Specified Sewer area.

Pursuant to Section 766AA of the "Municipal Act," the following text of By-law No. 282, "Zoning By-law (Sooke), 1976" is hereby published.

COURTING ATTIRE IN WRONG COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Department store heir Jeffrey Cohen, 25, wore a striped dressing gown accented by snakeskin shoes when he appreared in provincial court Tuesday on seven traffic charges.

Police arrested him in the early hours of the morning when they answered a disturbance call at his girlfriend's apartment building.

They found him in his dressing gown and shoes in the hallway of the building and that's how he appeared in court.

"I was picked up at my girlfriend's house," Cohen told Judge John MacIntyre in apologizing for his unorthodox courtroom attire.

The judge said there was no need to apologize but suggested he wear something more suitable when he appears again Feb. 2. Bail was set at $100.

Cohen is charged with driving without proper registration, two counts of driving without a licence, driving without insurance, failing to observe licence restrictions, improperly displaying licence plates and not having a safety inspection sticker on his vehicle.

'Very Foolish' Man Imprisoned

A 24-year-old Courtenay man was sentenced in Victoria county court Tuesday to three months in jail and placed on probation for two years for trafficking in marijuana.

Norman McGill pleaded guilty earlier to selling one ounce of marijuana to an undercover policeman May 26 and selling one pound of marijuana to an undercover policeman June 1.

Court was told McGill had a good employment history, no criminal record and had spent the last 64 days in custody.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart said "you've been very, very foolish and unfortunately, criminally foolish."

He didn't see how he could deter others without an' 'unnecessarily severe sentence" and "you don't appear to have been deterred" by the sentences imposed on other people.

The Court of Appeal has made it clear that, unless there are special circumstances, there must be a jail sentence for drug trafficking and "I can't find such special circumstances here."

However, he noted that McGill had already spent 64 days in jail.

MAYBE HE'LL COP A PLEA

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy who lives across the street from police headquarters has stolen enough equipment during the last year to supply a small police department, police say. The youth, caught last weekend in a stolen car, has stolen three magnum revolvers, 388 rounds of ammunition and several boxes of cartridges, a city car and more than six walkie-talkies.

Suspended Sentence For 'Duped'

A 28-year-old Victoria man was given a suspended sentence in Victoria county court Tuesday and placed on probation for two years for being an accessory after the fact in an armed robbery in Saanich May 14.

"I'm going to accept at face value the statement you have made that you deny any knowledge of the robbery until after the event and accept your assurance it will never happen again," Judge Peter Millward told Thomas Iverson.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Iverson had no criminal record and "appears to have been duped, at least in part, to participate in this offence."

Millward attached a number of conditions to probation, including total abstinence from alcohol and non-prescription drugs, reporting weekly to a probation officer, staying within the county of Victoria and continuing to see a psychiatrist.

Iverson pleaded guilty to the offence Oct. 25 and was remanded until Tuesday for a pre-sentence report.

Court was told earlier that four adults went by car to 4423 Tyndall May 14. One person stayed in the car while the other three went into the house, one armed with a 12-gauge shotgun. They made off wtih $180 in cash and three pounds of marijuana. Iverson told police he was the driver.

"I'd like to get the information dismissed," said Gilbert Leon Beaudry, 20, charged with possession of marijuana.

"Sure you would," commented provincial court Judge Blake Allan on Tuesday.

With all the drama of a Perry Mason courtroom episode, Beaudry waved a few sheets of paper in his hand.

"I want to do a thing here," he said, citing several excerpts from the Criminal Code of Canada dealing with drug charges.

The judge shuffled some papers in front of him; the prosecutor looked amused, several lawyers present stared at the ceiling and the spectators squirmed.

Undeterred, Beaudry continued quoting sections from the Criminal Code, insisting that he had grounds for the charge to be dismissed.

The judge then told him all he could do was plead guilty or not guilty to the charge. This, he said, wasn't the place or the time for defence motions.

When the accused continued his attempts to have the charge thrown out, the judge ruled that Beaudry was entering a plea of not guilty, and set the trial for Feb. 4, 1977.

Beaudry looked at the judge, took his Criminal Code excerpts and left the prisoner's box, saying there were laws and he intended to make them work for him.

Author Dies at 72

ROME (AFP) — Ercole Patti, 72, one of Italy's greatest authors, died here Monday. A native of Sicily, Patti started writing at age 15, moving into journalism before publishing his first important novel, Quartieri Alti, in 1940. Among the books that followed were Giovannini (1954), recently made into a film, and Un Bellisimo Novembre, considered to be his greatest work.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

All four were charged on two counts each; all pleaded guilty and were fined $25 on each count.

Three Edmonton men were remanded in custody after pleading guilty to stealing a car.

Richard A. Guindon, 21, Leonard R. Smith, 21, and Kenneth E. Thorburn, 20, were arrested by Victoria police early Tuesday morning at Douglas and Belleville.

Police arrested them after they found B.C. licence plates mounted on top of Alberta plates on the car they were driving.

Police found that the car had been stolen in Edmonton a short time ago.

Allan remanded them for sentence to get information on whether Edmonton has a community work system, similar to the one used in sentencing in B.C.

"The accused are all unemployed and they don't live here," the judge said.

There's no use fining them. It's either jail or some other alternative which I usually look for," he added.

Microwaves: A Hot Item

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

This year the hot item in Victoria appliance stores is the fast-cooking microwave oven with sales ranging from 50 per cent to 100 per cent higher than last year.

Store managers see it as part of the convenience wave.

A working wife can do the week's cooking on Saturday and put the portions into the deep freeze. The meals can be heated in about one-third the time of a stove.

"There's no question microwave ovens are a big hit this year," said Simpsons - Sears Ltd. manager Jack Hutchins.

"These things tend to be like fashions. First everyone had to have a color TV. Then came blenders. Now it's microwave ovens."

Hutchins said the first interest came from working wives but a few housewives are also starting to buy them.

"Housewives are very busy people. They don't want to spend all afternoon cooking."

Reginald Hind, manager of the Victoria branch of Eaton's, said that microwave oven sales in his store are expected to be up 100 per cent from last winter.

"These ovens go with the deep freeze, which is also very popular. The ovens cook frozen food in about one third th time."

They range in price from a low of $339 for a small model to a top of about $750.

They cook hot dogs in 90 seconds, hamburgers in just over two minutes and six slices of bacon in about five minutes.

A five-pound roast of beef takes about 40 minutes compared with upwards of two hours in a stove.

Christmas turkey will go in the larger microwave ovens and cooking time is just under one hour for smaller birds and can take 90 minnutes or more for the large family-size turkey.

This compares with from three to five hours in a stove oven.

Joe Schauerty, appliance salesman at Eaton's, says buyers report vegetables look better after being cooked in a microwave oven but some meat dishes take a bit of getting used to.

"A roast of beef will not get quite as dark on the outside and will be quite light on the inside because it is cooked so quickly. But it is well-done and is delicious. People say it is fine once they get used to the new shades of coloring. Chicken also tends to look a bit lighter than when cooked in a stove oven."

Vegetables look darker cooked in a microwave oven than in a pot, where they get strained through the boiling process. Bakery goods are no problem because most cakes and cupcakes are covered with icing and the light coloring is not noticed.

In most cases artificial coloring is available for some products but many customers simply adjust to the new look of cooked food, Schauerty said.

Sales were slow in 1975 because the microwave ovens were still a new idea and there was a concern about possible radiation leaks.

This problem arose from an early model with a door that occasionally did not close properly. The door of 1976 models closes tightly and all radiation is cut off before the door can be opened.

A refinement on the time-setting system this year is the micro-wave thermometer, which cooks according to a pre-set temperature. The thermometer shuts the oven off automatically when the desired temperature is reached. Optimum temperatures for each type of dish are listed with the ovens.

The thermometer prevents a meal from being overcooked, which occasionally happens when a dish is cooked by time controls.

FAVORITE CHEESE CAKE

2 tablespoons butter
3 double graham crackers, finely crushed (½ cup crumbs)
1½ pounds cream cheese
1 cup sugar
1⅛ teaspoons vanilla
4 large eggs
Topping see below

Melt the butter; stir in the crumbs; pat over the bottom of a 10-inch spring form pan. Beat together the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla; add eggs and beat thoroughly; pour over crumbs in pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Cool completely — this takes quite a while. Pour the Topping over the baked cooked cake; bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Chill. Using a knife dipped in water, cut into goodsize wedges at serving time.

Topping: Stir together 1 pint commercial sour cream with 5 tablespoons sugar.

Tarragon Tasty

To give interesting seasoning to beef patties, add a little dried crushed tarragon. Good served with creamed potatoes. Before adding the tarragon, season the ground meat only with salt and pepper.

Salmon is added to Chinese vegetables in egg rolls

Salmon and Vegetable Chinese Egg Rolls

Mary Moore

A common request from Chinese food lovers is for egg roll "skins".

Actually these are very easy to make for they are simply crepes or pancakes made in a 6 or 7" pan, one at a time. They can be made in advance and stored stacked between little sheets of waxed paper.

To put them to any day use we will give you an easy salmon-Chinese vegetable filling and of course the method of rolling and finishing.

SALMON EGG ROLLS

Filling:

3 tbsp. oil
1⅓ c. finely chopped celery
1 c. finely chopped onion
1 19-oz. can chop suey vegetables, drained
1 15½-oz. can salmon, drained
2 tbsp. soy sauce
2 tbsp. sherry (optional)
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
2 tbsp. corn starch
3 tbsp. water

Egg Roll Wrappers: (skins)

2 eggs
1 c. all-purpose flour
2 tbsp. corn starch
½ tsp. salt
2 c. water

Make the Filling first by gently sauteing in the oil the celery and onion one minute. Reduce heat and add drained shop suey vegetables and drained, flaked salmon and stir to mix. Add soy, sherry (if desired), salt and sugar and mix. Do not overcook — simply heat through. Mix corn starch with water to a paste and stir in to thicken a little. Remove from heat at once.

To make the wrappers or skins beat together all wrapper ingredients until perfectly smooth. Melt about 1 teaspoon butter in a 6 or 7" frying pan to coat. When butter bubbles add 2½ to 3 tablespoons batter, tip pan to cover bottom and cook over medium heat until light gold on bottom and dry on top. Do not turn over. Transfer to paper towels on large plate. Continue until all batter is cooked. I had 18.

Working on a board, place filling along centre of wrapper to within 1" of each end. Fold in sides then roll up. Place in buttered long baking dish side by side, open side down. Brush tops with mixture of 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1 teaspoon sugar. Place under preheated broiler to tinge until gold and heated through.

NOTE: Egg Rolls can be sealed by brushing ends with beaten egg and pressing to seal. Then deep fat fry or shallow pan dry. Unless you become expert at rolling and sealing these could open and are a flop.

SUPER SQUARES

1 lb. hard butter (do not substitute)
4 c. stirred but unsifted cake-and-pastry flour (do not substitute)
⅓ c. dairy sour cream
1 tsp. vanilla
3 tbsp. sugar (no more)
4 medium egg yolks
½ tsp. salt
½ c. sesame seeds (divided —see below)
½ c. marmalade
½ c. red currant jelly

In a bowl with a pastry blender cut the butter into the flour until size of small peas. Add sour cream, vanilla, sugar, yolks and salt. With strong wooden spoon stir until thoroughly blended. Chill until very firm. Cut into three equal portions. On lightly floured board roll out ⅓ of the dough to fit 15x10½" pan (jelly roll pan) making it neat and even around edges with your floured fingertips. Carefully spread sparingly with marmalade. Roll out second ⅓ of dough and cover marmalade. Trim off rough edges with knife. Add these scraps to remaining ⅓ of dough. Cover second layer of dough sparingly with the red currant jelly. Sprinkle with HALF of the sesame seeds.

Roll out remaining dough and cover jelly. Trim off excess edges and carefully fit into any remaining crevices. Sprinkle remaining sesame seeds all over and with both palms press gently down.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 15 minutes then reduce heat to 325 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 20 minutes longer. Test at very centre for doneness by cutting out a ¾" square with sharp knife but let it cool a little before you taste it.

Tourtiere Spices Crucial tiny bennett

A California reader recently asked if I could possibly get a recipe for tourtiere, as she had tried everythwere without success.

I must say I was rather surprised she had a problem because I've always thought of this fine French Canadian meat pie as international in scope.

In the back of my mind I have the idea that someone once told me that the tourtiere was originally made with a filling of breasts of passenger pigeons, rather like the European rook pie, but I've been unable to get further word on this. Certainly venison must have been used in early days but from pioneer times the traditional meat filling for this fine double-crust pie has been pork.

While in French Canada the tourtiere is usually a Christmas dish. I'm going to give it today for the lady in California and indeed all my readers.

My version calls for a mixture of one-third each of pork, veal and beef, which makes for an exceptionally tasty pie. However the reader may use all pork, or pork and veal, or if pork is not part of the family diet, then the filling can be half veal and half beef.

The choice of the meat is important and my favorite cuts are all from the shoulder of the animals ground together to get the best texture and mix.

For convenience, get your butcher to grind up 1½ pounds of equal parts shoulder beef, veal and pork, or use 1½ pounds of the ground meat of your choice.

Like most pies of this traditional style, the tourtiere is very simple to make but calls for the generous use of spices, some of which are unusual in a meat dish. It is important to get the spices right, otherwise the pie will be bland when eaten cold.

Heat up a large skillet and sautee a piece of salt pork, finely diced, or three slices of finely diced bacon, until it is crisp and brown. Add one small onion in small dice and when this is transparent add:

- 1 clove of garlic diced
- 1½ pounds ground meat
- ¾ cup of consomme, or the same amount of water blended with a beef cube
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 2 tablespoons fresh chopped celery leaves
- 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 crushed bay leaf, dash of mace, dash of chervil, dash of ground cloves, dash of cayenne pepper and a good grind of fresh black pepper.

Mix well and simmer on low heat for about 45 minutes, stirring from edges into the centre to blend and ensure even cooking. Remove from the heat and allow to cool for a few minutes, because the next step is determined by the amount of juices present and this varies according to the fat content of the meat.

Add finely ground bread crumbs, one teaspoon at a time, to soak up juices until the pan contents are fairly dry. This is to stop the insides from running if the pie is eaten hot, but go easy with the crumbs, otherwise your tourtiere will be dry in texture.

Now leave the mix to cool, covered with a cloth, and make up enough rich pastry for a double layer pie.

For the pastry, combine five cups all-purpose flour with two teaspoons salt, add one pound lard or your choice of shortening and cut together with two knives until it has the texture of coarse meal. In a measuring cup, beat one egg into one tablespoon vinegar, make up to one cup with cold water and add slowly to the flour mix, adding only enough to make the dough cling — I find mine takes about ⅔ of the cup.

Pinch off enough to floor a large pie plate or shallow dish, roll and put into place cutting off surplus.

Add the cooled meat mix and cover with a top crust and add decorations. Seal the edges with a finger dipped in cold water and cut slits to allow steam to escape.

Start your tourtiere off in a 425 oven on a rack set ⅓ up from the bottom. After 15 minutes, brush the top with a mix of an egg beaten in milk and turn down the heat to 350 and continue baking for 35 to 45 minutes. To get a really rich look to the top crust, brush two or three times more with the egg-milk mix.

This makes a fairly large pie and you might find the meat will go to two pies if you only have small plates. I have a nice big one and this still leaves a double handful of meat mix, so I susually take the spare pastry, roll it into a round, slap the meat in and seal the edges to make a meat-turnover. Bake this for a reduced time on a cookie sheet set on the bottom rack.

The Unlucky Hunter's Answer: A Rabbit Made of Cheese

hilda beastall

The 100-year-old lady was asked by a reporter what she considered to be most responsible for her long life. After a thoughtful pause she answered, "Vittles, I guess."

How true and how concise. Yet this reply can be appreciated only if the reader knows the meaning of Vittles. Unfortunately this simple word for "food" is now obsolete and absent from three dictionaries, including the Oxford Unabridged.

Other words concerned with food yet just as dim in meaning are used in article headlines and recipe names. Unless the reader is either an observing traveller or a great reader of literature concerned with food, much useful information will be lost.

Even the common everyday foods become more interesting when we know something of their beginnings and the reason for the names.

Most of us enjoy what we have called Welsh Rarebit, a thick cheese sauce served hot on crisp toast. It seems that this dish should be known as Welsh Rabbit for a good reason brought out in a story discovered in a small book of world recipes.

Welshmen years ago were great hunters of rabbits when other meat was scarce. If they returned home without even this tidbit, the housewife would cut a block of cheese into small bits and set it before the fire (probably of coal in Wales). Strips of bacon fat were hung above the pan so that as it cooked, the fat dripped into the melting cheese. These two foods were eaten with chunks of homemade bread and became known as Welsh Rabbit as a sort of joke against the unsuccessful rabbit hunters.

Gradually this good beginning became popular in surrounding areas and, in a modified form, found favor in adjoining England as a pretty good meat substitute during that country's changing circumstances.

Today we make and enjoy Welsh Rabbit as a quick, nourishing meal for lunch or even supper if accompanied by either cooked vegetables or a plentiful green salad.

WELSH RABBIT

- a pinch of paprika
- a pinch of dry mustard
- ¼ cup thick milk from powder OR evaporated milk
- ½ cup crumbled Cheddar cheese
- 2 or 3 thick slices wholewheat bread, toasted slowly until crisp

Stand milk in saucepan on very low heat, stir in paprika and mustard. A few grains of curry powder are liked by many folks.

When liquid is hot but nowhere near boiling, add cheese crumbled into small rough pieces. Stir, always in the same direction, until the cheese is melted. Don't put pan over heat for melting but just in the warmth of the range top. The mixture must never boil or become overheated or the cheese toughens and becomes indigestible.

Have the toast freshly made, crisp and buttered, on warm plates. Spoon cheese sauce over toast. Serves 2 or 3.

From Wales we skip across to France where Truffles were discovered to be edible in ancient days and, perhaps because of their scarcity, are now a top gourmet food in that country and in parts of Spain and Italy where farmers are lucky enough to find them in the countryside.

The truffle is a fungus, as is the mushroom, although it does not appear above ground. In a few areas of France these fungi grow at the base of green oak, chestnut and hazelnut trees, near the trunk. Apparently their odor can be detected by pigs, so the farmer will harness a pig and, keeping it on a leash, goes truffle-hunting. When the pig locates a find, the farmer digs down for the treasure.

One hopes the harnessed pig occasionally gets a feed, too, of what must be a favorite food. Dogs are trained for the work also. Truffles are not known to have been cultivated, though one would think modern science would find a way of raising the spores in suitable media under laboratory conditions.

In Canada truffles are sometimes seen in cans at gourmet prices no doubt, and hopefully with directions as to their uses and preparations. The flavor is said to resemble mild garlic.

If you have lived in the larger cities of eastern Canada and the United States you will have come across Bagels. Thinking of their place in the casual eating habits of past times, I liken them to a doughnut (ring) in a more nutritious form.

Bagels are formed of yeast dough, sometimes with an egg added. After kneading and rising, circles of dough are broiled under a flame for 3 minutes, and then dropped into rapidly boiling water over moderate heat for 15 minutes. They are then moved to a cookie sheet to bake in fairly hot oven 190 deg. C. until bagels are brown and crisp, about 15 minutes. A little sugar in the boiling water gives the smooth, shining crust one remembers as a part of bagel nostalgia. Eat with cream cheese, cottage cheese or Canadian cheddar.

We see recipes for Strudel and others for Streusel. This becomes a bit confusing for we can find no exact meaning for the words to translate from the Austrian into comparable English. Nearest is the German "streusen" meaning to spread (or strew).

This could be a likely root for the words, since both Strudel and Streusel are pastries with a mixture spread over the pastry, or cake, base.

Apple Strudel is a most delicious and nutritious pastry concoction of paper-thin dough spread with apples, raisins, currants, nuts and dry breadcrumbs (to absorb moisture from apples as they cook). Rolled up like a jelly roll and cut into serving pieces, it is then baked in a fairly hot 190 deg. C. oven until crisp and brown.

Streuselkuchen (streusel Cake), another Austrian coffee-cake type, has a rich yeast dough base rolled out to a ¼-inch thickness, and allowed to rise until almost double in bulk on cookie sheet.

The Streusel topping consists of butter (or margarine), flour and sugar mixed into crumb texture and spread over the dough, which is first lightly brushed with melted butter before the crumbs are spread or strewn.

The Streusel Cake is then baked in a moderate 177 deg. C. oven for about 35 minutes.

One of the most interesting words to reappear lately is Sourdough as applied to bread. But that is a long story for another day.

NOODLE PUDDING

- 1 8-ounce package medium wide egg noodles
- 2 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
- 3 large eggs
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup apricot nectar
- Topping, if desired (see below)

In a large saucepot, according to package directions, cook the noodles; drain in a colander. Return the hot noodles to the clean large saucepot and add the cream cheese and butter; toss until both have melted. Turn into a buttered 2-quart oblong glass baking dish (11 by 7½ by 1 inches) or similar utensil.

In a medium mixing bowl, beat together the eggs, sugar, milk and apricot nectar just until combined; pour over the noodles and stir together well. If used, sprinkle with the Topping.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until firm — 45 minutes. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes. Serve hot.

Makes 8 delicious servings.

Topping: In a 10-inch skillet over low heat melt 6 tablespoons butter or margarine; off heat, stir in 1 cup finely crushed corn flakes, ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

You may, if you like, make up half the recipe for the topping; in this case border the pudding with it instead of sprinkling it over the entire surface.

MEDAL MARKS CORONATION

OTTAWA (CP) — A silver medal is to be struck to mark the 25th anniversary of the Queen's coronation, the secretary of state department announced Monday.

The medal will be presented to outstanding Canadians during 1977, the Queen's Silver Jubilee.

A similar medal is being planned in Britain.

Good Nutrition Takes Thought, Care and Knowledge

Shoppers need their wits about them these days.

It's hard to know what we are buying. Coconut oil is a good case in point. Obviously, if we are to reduce the amount of saturated fat in our diets, it would be desirable to eliminate coconut and palm oil.

Depending on which one is cheaper, palm or coconut oil is used by manufacturers in the same products. Since we know that they contain coconut or palm oil, it is simple to banish powdered, frozen or liquid coffee creamers from our tables and around our coffee machines at the office.

But what of all of the other products like chips, convenience spread and cookies? What oil is in them? We don't know and won't know without some government regulations and industry co-operation.

Three- or four-ounce servings of meat are large enough. Meat is a very useful nutritional "go-along" with with other foods such as cereals, legumes, dairy products, fruits and vegetables and it "boosts" the nutritional components.

We would have a much more difficult time balancing both budgets and diets without liver, for example. And where would we be without ground beef for hamburgers and casseroles? But you don't need six or eight ounces at one serving; four ounces will suffice. Always buy lean meat and trim off any fat.

Luncheon meats such as bologna, sausages and salamis are sold fresh, cooked, or dried. Whatever the flavor you favor, eat them in moderation if you are concerned about fat and waste.

All labels of margarines and oils are required by regulations to carry a declaration of the type of oil they contain, i.e. vegetable oil, marine oil.

Hard margarines have very little to commend them except price. They are made of combinations of marine (fish) and-or vegetable oils and have been hydrogenated to a high saturation level.

Soft margarines, on the other hand are not as highly saturated as hard margarines. The higher the percentage of polyunsaturates, the better the margarine. A soft margarine labelled as having 35 per cent polyunsaturates to 20 per cent saturates is therefore preferable to one with 27 per cent polyunsaturates to 20 per cent saturates, and this in turn is preferable to a hard margarine with fewer polyunsaturates than saturates.

What about salad dressings? Although there are many brands in the supermarkets, a homemade salad dressing is by far the best choice for salad eaters. When you make your own, you have control over the amount and type of oil. We prefer safflower and sunflower oils as they have a nutty flavor.

What about eggs? Should we? Shouldn't we? Unless your doctor eliminates them from your diet, never drop eggs completely from your shopping list. Moderation should be your motto. Allow yourself three to seven eggs per week. For those over the age of 40, try to live with three or four eggs a week — no more and no fewer.

A person whose blood cholesterol is high is usually advised by his doctor to stay away from foods heavy in cholesterol and fats, such as eggs. But a doctor should also ensure that his patients' nutrient needs are met in other ways.

Fried eggs are out. Forget eggs Benedict — except for the rare orange juice and champagne breakfast.

Egg substitutes are formulated foods developed to replace eggs in the diet of those who have high blood cholesterol and are coronary risk.

In our scheme of dining, there is a place for desserts of fruits and nuts, cheese and crackers — even an occasional slice of angel cake with sauce of hot cherries in Kirsch. We choose pies or cakes only occasionally.

The vegetable shortening on the market today are made by hydrogenating an oil.

There is evidence to suggest that the formation of the trans-form of fatty acid occurs during hydrogenation. This form of fatty acids has been shown to contribute to high blood cholesterol levels. So until we can be convinced that this danger is adequately regulated we will look to other unprocessed fats for pastry making.

Oil, (or if hard shortening is required, lard) are our choices for baked goods.

We've heard all sorts of objections to skim powder. The two we hear most often are "it tastes artificial" and "it doesn't dissolve well." As to the first — the processes used today make a product that tastes much more like fluid milk, and you'll find that it tastes better if you make it up several hours ahead of time and store in in the refrigerator.

"Milk powder doesn't dissolve in water." Today's instantized versions aren't a problem. The milk has been dried, moistened with steam and then re-dried (or instantized), and it combines rapidly when added to water.

Yoghurt is a fermented milk food, made from partialy skimmed milk, or sometimes whole milk, and bacterial cultures which give it a custard-like consistency without the cloying sweetness of a custard dessert.

Cheese is an excellent food that combines many of the nutritional qualities of milk with a chewy texture and any one of a variety of sophisticated flavors.

Harder cheese can be kept in the refrigerator for longer than soft cheeses. Wrap any cheese in moisture-proof wrapping and it will keep for several weeks. Some cheeses — cheddar, Swiss, Edam and Gouda — can be stored in the freezer if frozen quickly in small packages (½ lb.).

All cheeses are high in protein. In cheese making, the protein from milk is curdled. But there are rich high-fat cheeses made from milk and cream and some, which are low in fat, are made from skim milk and partly skimmed milk.

Cottage cheese is a low fat cheese. It is made by cooking pasteurized skim milk, evaporated skim milk or skim milk powder until it separates into curds and whey.

Creamed cottage cheese must have a minimum of 4 per cent butterfat and each ½ cup serving has 130 calories. The dry cottage cheese has about 90 calories for that same ½ cup.

Processed cheeses are made from natural cheeses, emulsified and stabilized and extruded into different shapes to become processed cheese spread, slices, or processed cheese food. Natural cheeses, such as a cheddar or Camembert, develop flavor with age. The flavor is as much a part of a good aged cheese as the taste and texture. Processed cheeses are stopped before they have a chance to age and in our opinion lose personality in the process.

In addition, processed cheese has a color and a preservative like propionate or sorbate added to it to prevent bacteria and mould from growing on it. Boring as we consider the result, this cheese does have the same nutrition value as natural cheese.

Cereal is the first solid food to pass our lips as infants and the starter for each new day thereafter. It is an inportant part of the diet.

The best nutritional and economical value still comes from unrefined hot cereal; next to that is the refined cereal with vitamins and a little or no sugar added.

Hot whole-grain cereals are best not because they are hot (although there's something about a steaming pot of fragrant oatmeal on a cold morning) but because they are unrefined and only slightly processed.

"Instant" oatmeal, although it tastes like any other hot cereal, has been steam-treated, rolled, then cooked and dried and this processing can affect any of the water-soluble or heat-sensitive nutrients.

"Quick" oatmeal has been processed too, although not as severely. Despite the nutrients lost by subjecting it to heat it still contains more food value than any cold cereal.

Regular oatmeal has only been hulled and rolled and Scotch-type oatmeal has merely been ground. Most of their nutrients and fibre remain for our benefit.

The main thing about unrefined hot cereals is that they contain most of the vitamins, minerals and protein of the wholesome grains they are made from. Some cold cereals manufacturers claim to have added missing vitamins and minerals back to refined grains, but the truth is they haven't added all of them.

Cold cereals deserve their innings, however. We need them for variety, for an early start on camping trips and for smoldering hot days when we can't face hot cereal.

Sugar-coated cereals are the bane of the nutritionists' existence. Not only are they a wasted item at mealtime but they are all too often used as snacks which diminish the appetite for proper meals.

indoor gardens

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: Plants saved my sanity. After my husband completed graduate school in Lansing, Mich., we moved to New York. For 10 months I had a job as a library assistant in a trade association. It was a disaster. Every night I came home and cried for an hour. It took me two months to get up my courage and quit. As a result, I developed an "advanced failure syndrome."

Coupled with classic New York paranoia, I was a basket case. I felt unproductive, useless and not interested in anything at all. I slept an incredible amount of time. I would not call anyone, answer telephones and was terrified in front of people. At about rock bottom a girl down the hall moved to Chicago and gave me her house plants. I knew absolutely nothing about indoor gardening. Several died, but some made it. It was fantastic therapy. For the first time I felt as if I had a positive effect on something.

I have already started my new collection and have tremendous plans for the future. I plan to start school working for a degree in ornamental horticulture. Besides having a gentle understanding and loving husband, I credit plants with having saved my peace of mind. — H. G., Los Angeles, Calif.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I signed a three-year lease for an apartment in a very expensive high-rise building, at which time the manager assured me that there would always be someone available to walk "Her Highness," my French poodle. I would not have rented the apartment without that stipulation, and it was my understanding that it was written into my lease.

Everything was fine for 14 months. The elevator man, the guard, the janitor or the manager himself would walk Her Highness regularly.

Well, the building changed ownership, and the new manager instructed all the help that they were not to walk any dogs on company time.

When I told the new manager that it had been written into my lease, he laughed and said I must be kidding. I then phoned my lawyer who checked my lease and he said it had not been written in.

What do I do now?

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Make new arrangements to have Her Highness walked. Trying to hold the new management to an agreement you had with the old management will be a royal headache.

Back to Basics In Mothering

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

At a recent meeting of Canadian biologists, an amazing number of women scientists brought their babies to the sessions, and sat and nursed them while they talked "shop" with their colleagues. It was a refreshing and encouraging sight: young mothers in light capes, playing with their children and breast-feeding them, without embarrassment, when they were hungry. Breast-feeding is once again becoming a socially acceptable practice. And that's a nice change.

For years mothers have had to fight to be allowed to breast-feed their children. They've been told more about preparing formulas than they have about the problems and benefits of breast-feeding. Many hospitals still send mothers and babies home with a sample supply of formula.

Society frowned a little on breast-feeding, taking the attitude that mother and baby should be hidden away in a back room. All in all, we've not made it easy or attractive for young, active mothers to tie themselves to the routine of breast-feeding.

But all that is changing. Nutritionists have always recommended mother's milk. Today we are being strongly supported by pediatricians across the United States and Canada. And mothers are listening.

Human milk is the one food best suited for human babies. Besides that, it's convenient to serve, economical to provide, nutritionally superior to any infant formula and, as a friend once said, "comes in a pretty container." Mother's milk protects the baby against infections. In the first month or so, after birth, mother's milk contains desirable, friendly bacteria that check the growth of other less friendly bacteria, and it contains valuable anti-bodies that fight disease-causing germs. Babies depend on the protection mothers' anti-bodies afford them until their own immune systems can be fully developed. (That's why mothers who are unable to nurse their babies have to take special care with the cleanliness and sanitation of the baby's environment. Babies, in those first few weeks, are fragile things.)

Your baby cannot digest cow's milk "as is." The main protein in cow's milk is casein: it's hard for a baby to digest. In mother's milk, the main protein is albumin, a protein easily digested by your baby. And cow's milk and mother's milk differ in other ways: in mother's milk the salts are less concentrated, and the fat is less saturated. That may explain the need for baby formulas. They're processed to soften the protein and make it more digestible. They dialyze some of the salts out, and replace some of the butterfat in cow's milk with less saturated vegetable oils. In short, formulas are "made" to resemble mother's milk. Most of them are quite adequate. If you are feeding a baby, and looking for a formula, avoid the ones that contain coconut or palm oil. These oils are highly saturated, and not particularly good for your baby. Many formulas and ready-to-feed preparations for babies have emulsifiers and stabilizers added to them, to keep the ingredients and the oils all well-mixed. You would be better to reconstitute the powder forms of the formulas. But, if you do choose to reconstitute a powdered formula, you must remember to use water that has been boiled for 20 minutes, and then cooled under sanitary conditions to guard your baby against infection.

So, breast-feeding is a good, healthy way to feed your baby and it's easier than preparing formulas. It's also emotionally and psychologically satisfying for both mother and baby. But you have to commit a fair amount of time: you have to be available when your baby has to be fed.

Because breast-feeding is a commitment, each mother must decide for herself whether or not she will be able to breast-feed her child. For some mothers, because of their jobs or other commitments, breast-feeding is impossible and they must look to formulas and other means of feeding their babies.

But we would encourage every mother to try nursing her baby. Even if you can only do it for a few weeks or a few months, it's worth it — for you and your baby. Some mothers rely on a combination of breast and bottle feeding, so that they are less tied down, but still have the satisfaction of nursing their babies.

For new mothers, we'll warn you: you may have some difficulty starting the flow of milk. That's natural. Most women have little milk in the first few days. And babies are seldom hungry. Breast-feeding is a matter of technique. It takes practice; and encouragement from those around you. You have to learn how to do it, but once you know, and escape the worries and anxieties of the first few days, you'll find it a warm, pleasing experience that will bring you closer to your baby.

Cookies Make Great Gifts

Cookie giving is a neighborly way to remember the folks next door or the friend down the street. A pretty plate or box of goodies topped with a bow is as much fun to receive, as it is to fill. Although you may have family favourite recipes, it is still fun to try new ones too.

No cookie collection is complete without soemthing chocolate and Martha's Frosted Chocolate Drops fill the bill beautifully. These nutty treats are easy to make and the yield is good — a generous 5-6 dozen — enough for family pleasure and gift giving too.

Another sure-to-please cookie is Penoche Coconuts: rich, crisp and delicious. The recipe yields 7-8 dozen — enough for several gift boxes and of course, plenty for the family too. Why not get the family in on the cookie-making spree — they can chop nuts and help measure the ingredients.

MARTHA'S FROSTED CHOCOLATE DROPS

Yield: 5-6 dozen

½ cup lard
3 (1 oz.) squares unsweetened chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
¾ cup sugar
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour or 2¼ cups pastry flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup milk
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup raisins

Melt lard and chocolate together. Stir in sugar, then eggs and vanilla. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Fold in nuts and raisins. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees F. about 10-12 minutes. Frost with chocolate frosting.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING

¼ tablespoon lard
2 (1 oz.) square unsweetened chocolate
¼ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups sifted icing sugar

Combine lard, chocolate and water in saucepan and melt over low heat. Blend in salt, egg yolk and vanilla. Beat in the icing sugar until smooth.

PENOCHE COCONUTS

Yield: 7-8 dozen

1 cup lard
1½ cups brown sugar, packed
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
2 cups sifted all-purpose or 2¼ cups pastry flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 cups (8 oz.) coconut

Blend together lard and sugar. Add vanilla and eggs one at a time, beating after each addition. Sift together flour, salt and soda. Add and blend thoroughly. Stir in coconut. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a cookie sheet. Press down with a fork. Bake at 375 degrees F. about 8-10 minutes.

You probably know that apples are good for you. They aid intestinal activity and contain valuable vitamins and minerals. Furthermore, because of their crispness, they stimulate the gums.

But did you know that a bushel of apples weighs about 45 pounds, or that a 6-quart basket holds approximately seven pounds and a 4-quart basket about five pounds?

We Canadians grow 21 varieties of apples. Most of these are for all-purpose use. However, Delicious, Golden Russet, Lobo and Fameuse are foremost dessert apples.

The 24-page illustrated booklet Apples tells you how apples are graded, stored and packed. In addition, it offers over 40 recipes for delectable apple dishes which can be served for breakfast, as a main course, dessert or as a special treat.

Among the unusual desserts is applesauce sherbet, apples in honey, apple gingerbread pudding and apple spice bars. Recipes for different kinds of apple pie are also included.

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

I read in a movie magazine that silicone injections can remove wrinkles around the mouth. I remember that you once said that silicone is dangerous. — Mrs. N.B.

A movie magazine is hardly your best source for medical information

Silicone, once used extensively in breast surgery, has been discarded because of the hazards associated with it. Using large quantities of silicone for smoothing out wrinkles or for elevating scars is generally considered to be a risky procedure. Only in isolated cases, where, following an accident in which severe facial disfigurement occurs, is silicone sometimes used. And then only when facial plastic surgeons have exhausted their ingenuity for other solutions to the problem. In such cases, silicone may still be occasionally used in small quantities even though there is a recognized risk.

A new technique known as "threading" has recently been reported as a method of removing wrinkles of the forehead and around the lips. When more information about this is available I will write about it. In the meantime, be very wary of silicone.

I found that when I wear a tight collar I get dizzy. I don't mean to be funny, but this is true. When my collar is opened I am never bothered. How do you explain this? — Mr. H.D.

Dear Mr D.:

You may have helped make your own diagnosis.

On each side of the neck is a complex or large arteries, large veins, and important nerves.

In the midst of these is situated a tiny nerve tissue known as the "carotid sinus" (in no way related to the nasal sinus). When this carotid sinus is pressured by the finger, or by a tight collar, changes in the heart rate may occur. This may be accompanied by an inadequate amount of blood and oxygen to the brain and produce a momentary feeling of dizziness or faintness.

Since you have latched on to an important physical response you should have this investigated by your doctor, by a neurologist and by a specialist in vascular conditions.

I am in the theatre. One of the actors in my company gives himself an injection of vitamin B every time he goes on stage at the beginning of his performance. He says it gives him energy. He tries to sell the idea to all of us. Does it make sense? — Miss D. K.

Dear Miss K:

The best you can do is to stay away from becoming involved with such nonsense. I doubt that it is worth an expenditure of your own energy to try to convince your fellow actor that he is deluding himself in his belief.

Vitamin B in all its forms has very specific uses. It is given to supplement a deficiency, but it is not used routinely to pep up actors or anyone else.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

FIELD'S STORES: DOWNTOWN — 1420 DOUGLAS BELMONT CENTRE ESQUIMALT PLAZA

Plenty for Voters in C. Saanich

Central Saanich is offering voters more on Saturday's election day — a mayoralty race, a referendum, seven candidates for three council seats and two seeking a place on the regional board.

One of only two contests for mayor in the capital district has incumbent Jean Butler challenged by newcomer William Rogers.

Around the council table, Ald. Donald MacLuarin is retiring and aldermen Dave Hill and George MacFarlane are seeking re-election. Also contesting the three vacancies are G. D. "Boots" Gurr, Mrs. Lea King, Larry Scott, John Richard Sharpe and Earl Tabor.

Hill and sitting alderman Frank Waring are vying for MacLaurin's place on the Capital Region Board.

The referendum question will ask ratepayers if they favor sharing the cost of building and operating a recreation centre with Sidney and North Saanich. Central Saanich voters rejected a plan to build their own swimming pool centre in a referendum two months ago.

Candidates and their concerns:

Mayor Jean Butler of 1127 Chalet Rd., retired business woman, says she thinks she has proven her ability and is "completely free from conflicting aliances or commitments — my only vested interest is in the long-range good of the municipality."

She wants to see the new community plan implemented to ensure Central Saanich remains a pastoral community retaining is agricultural and pleasant residential balance. At the same time she would try to keep a tight rein on municipal spending.

William Rogers, 53, of 6429 Rodolph Rd., real estate branch manager for a trust company in Sidney and a newcomer to politics, says he is running because he's been alarmed at the complacency of council.

He sees council's recreation policy as badly handled and supports the tri-municipal approach, subject of the referendum. Retaining the rural atmosphere is important but ways must be found to expand the tax base and to establish sound working relations with neighboring governments and the province.

Aldermanic candidates:

G. D. (Boots) Gurr, 45, of 7198 Dignan Rd., marketing manager for a life insurance company, was among those leading early opposition to council's go-it-alone recreation policy.

He thinks the present mayor and council have not served the best interests of the majority and some changes are needed. Amalgamation of peninsula municipalities is inevitable, he says, and combined co-operation and pressure on the provincial government can bring changes to their liking.

Dave Hill, 34, of 1899 Hovey Rd., a Saanich fireman completing four years on council, says bringing a water supply to the peninsula is the most important issue at the moment and he would like to see through the work he has done on the issue.

Past-president of the peninsula water committee, he says it's important Central Saanich carefully consider costs rather than accept any hurried remedy. He wants the community to adhere to the community plan and is a firm believer in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Mrs. Lea King, 53, of 765 Harding Lane, a housewife in her first run at council, says she is in the contest "because it's there."

She believes citizens should take a turn at public service, she says, "even though it's not that much fun." She favors a tri-municipal approach to recreation development, wants the semi-rural atmosphere of Central Saanich to continue and believes municipal government is mainly a metter of good house-keeping and good management.

George MacFarlane, 54, of 1059 Mount Newton Crossroad, a market gardener who has been on council the past two years, says he is deeply committed to the agricultural land reserve concept and will work to control and stimulate more innovative development.

He is concerned about the cost of pending projects, such as water supply, a new hospital wing, high school, recreation and police station, and believes they must be ranked in order of importance. The current nine per cent growth rate should be slowed and there should be better communication with ratepayers.

Larry Scott, 33, of 2322 Tanner Rd., owner of a security firm and another newcomer, is running mainly because he is dissatisfied with the present council.

Recreation is the biggest issue and council's actions have disappointed him, he says. He favors the tri-municipal recreation centre and would also like closer co-operation between peninsula municipalities on other issues. Aldermen and citizens also need to be brought closer, possibly with a monthly newsletter from council to let people "know what's going on."

John Richard Sharpe, 53, of 1774 Prosser Rd., chief electrical draftsman at HMC Dockyard, says he has the time and energy to make a contribution to the people. He is the municipal representative on a family court committee and attends all council and committee meetings in his role of secretary to the Central Saanich Ratepayers' Association.

His principal concern is the increasing pressure from provincial government to escalate community growth rates against their wishes and contrary to good planning.

Earl Tabor, 52, of 6683 Tamany Drive, a notary public elected to council by a single vote four years ago lost his seat by six votes in the election of two years ago.

He says he's interested in the community and would like to see recreation plans brought to fruition. Water supply is the biggest problem and while he favors a joint approach with Sidney and Norts Saanich to solving it, "not at any price." Provincial help will be needed and he wants to be part of negotiations.

'Out to Lunch' On Centre Vote

A candidate running for alderman in Central Saanich says Ald. Donald MacLaurin is "right out to lunch" in charging that pressure was put on council to hold a recreation referendum in connection with the upcoming municipal election.

Larry Scott was commenting on a so-called secret letter from another aldermanic candidate, Gardo Gurr, to Central Saanich Mayor Jean Butler.

MacLaurin disclosed the contents of the letter Monday night and said it amounted to Gurr, chairman of the Citizens for Tri-municipal recreation, applying improper pressure on council.

The letter, dated Oct. 4, 1976, said the citizens' group would support a recreation referendum provided it was held in conjunction with the Nov. 20 elections on the question of whether to join North Saanich and Sidney in adding a curling rink.

Central Saanich council agreed Oct. 28 to hold a referendum on Saturday for a tri-municipal recreation centre to include a swimming pool and ice arena.

Scott said he was a member of the citizens' committee and was present with Gurr at a meeting with Mayor Butler.

The initial meeting proved futile so Butler asked the group to put their proposals in writing, Scott said.

"The reason it was done was not because we were trying to crucify anyone but because he (Gurr) was asked to put it in writing," he said.

He said that is one of the reasons he and Gurr decided to run for council.

He said it was incredible that a council, unable to make up its mind on an issue, would turn to a citizens group to make the decision for them.

Scott said MacLaurin is "out of line" in suggesting that Gurr or the citizens' group was trying to pressure Mayor Butler and council in some improper way.

120 Dolls Entered In Contest

More than 120 dolls have been entered in the Montreal Trust annual doll-dressing contest.

Prizes will be awarded in eight categories fancy dress, sensible dress, character, national, knit and crochet, baby doll, original and birde. There is also a grand prize winner.

The dolls will be on display at Montreal Trust, 1057 Fort, this week and next and may be viewed between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. each business day.

On Dec. 1 at 2 p.m. judging will take place by an panel consisting of Joan Fraser, fashion co-ordinator of Woodwards, Audrey Johnson, Times music and drama critic, and John Heath of Bastion Theatre.

Winning dolls in each category will be sent to Toronto as entries in a national winners' competition.

COUNCIL GIVES NOD TO ARCHIVE GROUP

Victoria city council Tuesday approved the formation of a city archives society — a proposal it turned down when archivist Ainslie Helmcken first submitted it 18 months ago.

In promoting the idea, Helmcken has pointed out that the existence of registered society to complement the present municipal archives operation would enable him to apply for various government grants and foundations which are not available under the current status.

Another benefit would be the opportunity to use the services of many volunteer helpers from the community, without possible conflict from union sources.

Helmcken told council Tuesday there are many knowledgeable citizens who are anxious to help in the task of preserving the archives and ensuring maximum availability to the public.

In turn, he was assured by Mayor Mike Young that "council will address itself to the task of finding a home for storage of the archival documents."

Helmcken has complained for years about inadequate storage capacity, and expressed concern recently when city engineer John Sansom ordered a clean-out of the Cith Hall third floor because piles of documents there were putting a strain on the old structure.

Sansom claims two-thirds of the material is "junk," mostly inter-departmental memoranda with no historical signifance; Helmcken says much of it must be preserved.

Council commended members of the inside starr union who have formed a committee to help the archivist sifting through the documents and relocating them.

Sensational Discovery Bares Vital Culture

ROME (NYT) — Italian archeologists, who have been working at a site in northern Syria for more than 10 years, are now convinced that they have made a "sensational discovery" of an ancient kingdom that flourished as an important cultural and commercial centre more than 4,300 years ago.

Their work was carried out at Ebla, just south of the modern city of Aleppo. Their breakthrough came last fall when they found 15,000 tablets in the archives chamber of the royal palace of the old kingdom and then began to decipher the cuneiform script that they said had not previously been seen.

"There were many skeptics at first," said Paolo Matthiae, the 36-year-old leader of the team and professor of Near East archeology of the University of Rome. "Now I think the discoveries are being generally accepted for what they are — evidence of the existence of a new world, one that rivalled the ancient kingdoms of Egypt and Mesopotamia."

Matthiae and a colleague, Giovanni Pettinato, a 42-year-old professor of Assyriology and a language expert, are not preparing documents and packing pictures for a trip to the United States to lecture on their discoveries.

The professors said that the tablets revealed the most ancient Semitic language yet found and added a wealth of knowledge about the third millenium. The tablets, which showed that the city of Ebla alone had a population of 260,000, covered the years from 2400 to 2500 B.C.

They said the findings were also of biblican significance.

For example, the tablets contain accounts of the creation and the flood, which the Italian experts said were similar to those found in the Old Testament and Babylonian literature.

One of the exciting revelations was a line on one of the tablets saying: "The kings came anointed with oil." He said this recalled the Old Testament ceremony when Hebrew kings such as Saul and David were anointed with oil at their coronation.

Moreover, the tablets mentioned the names of citizens that translated into David, Abraham, Israel, Eau and Saul. The reference to David was described as the oldest mention of the name found to date in ancient script.

BRITAIN EXPELS CIA PROBERS

LONDON — Britain today ordered former CIA agent Philip Agee, author of a highly-critical work on the agency's covert operations, out of the country.

The action came one day after the government ordered the expulsion of a U.S. investigative reporter Mark Hosenball whose work had concentrated on CIA activities in Britain.

Agee was ordered out of the country on what the home office called security grounds.

Commenting on his expulsion order, he said: "One possible reason is that the CIA has a new chief of staff in London and this might be one of his first orders of the day, as you might say.

Cyclamate Vows OK According to Pollster

ORLANDO, Fla. — Nostalgia is a nasal condition. Cyclamates should be allowed to get married if they want to live together. In Britain, the year 1776 has little or no significance. These are among the hundreds of thousands of opinions and comments that have been gathered through the years by pollster George Gallup Jr., president of the Gallup Poll. In an appearance before the American Association of Homes for the Aged, Gallup said that many people distrust and criticize pollsters. "Dear Mr. Gallup," he quoted one person as writing him, "on what do you bias your opinions."

LONDON — Lord Benjamin Britten, generally acknowledged as Britain's leading composer, is gravely ill with a deteriorating heart condition. The 62-year-old composer, whose best known works include the operas Peter Grimes and Billy Budd, is staying at his home in Aldeburgh, Suffolk, because there is nothing a hospital can do any more, said a friend. Britten has been fighting ill health since he underwent a heart operation in 1973.

EAST ALTON, Ill. — As it turned out, Sue Spurrier didn't need advertising to get a boyfriend. But it did help the British divorcee extend her stay in the United States. Mrs. Spurrier, 28, placed a newspaper advertisement seeking an American husband so she and her two young children could avoid being deported. She has since received more than 600 letters proposing marriage. But she now says she's had enough. She has a boyfriend—she met him at a dance. And two congressmen, Reps. Melvin Price and Paul Findley, helped her solve her problems with immigration officials by getting her an extension of her stay in the United States.

LOS ANGELES — Freddie Prinze, star of the Chico and the Man television series, was charged Tuesday with driving under the influence of drugs. Prinze, 22, was arrested Nov. 5 by a highway patrol officer who said he observed the actor driving erratically. Officer Richard Ripley said he found a two-ounce prescription bottle which contained a small quantity of methaqulone, a tranquilizer, in Prinze's shirt pocket.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — Garry Gilmore, a killer who wants to die, may have prolonged his life instead by taking sleeping pills in an apparent lovers' suicide pact that left him and his girl-friend in hospital. Gilmore, 35, who has fought efforts to delay his execution by a firing squad, remained in what officials called "very serious" condition today with a drug overdose complicated by pneumonia. He was taken to hospital Tuesday after taking sleeping pills and writing a suicide note despite what officials called a prison "suicide watch" to guard against such an attempt. Nicole Barrett, his girl-friend, was in critical condition in a coma at a hospital in Provo, 40 miles away from the prison here. Mrs. Barrett, 20, was found in her apartment on Tuesday morning, with two notes and two empty vials of sleeping pills nearby.

Lousy Marx For One Historian

LONDON—Karl Marx did become a British citizen in 1877 — Karl Marx the jeweller, that is.

The other Karl Marx, the father of Communism, never quite made it.

West German historian Michael Knierien, curator of the Friedrich Engels Museum in Wuppertal, is a little red-faced about it all.

Earlier this week he said the better-known Marx was granted British citizenship in 1877, 32 years after he renounced his Prussian nationality.

Knierien spent two weeks probing the files of London's Public Records Office and turned up a file approving a citizenship application by Marx, Karl, in March 1877.

Knierien went home and told the world that Communism's great guru was a Limey.

Then somebody in the Public Records Office looked a little closer at the application. It said Marx, Karl, jeweller, resident of New Bond Street, formerly a German citizen.

"It never occurred to me that there could be two of them living in London at the same time," Knierien said.

GERMANY FEATURED

Pursuant to Section 766AA of the Municipal Act, the following synopsis of By-law No. 306, cited as "Zoning By-law, Planning Area No. 2, Amendment By-law No. 43, 1976" is hereby published.

CAPITAL REGIONAL DISTRICT

A BY-LAW TO AMEND FORMER B.C. REGULATION No. 20/67 (ELECTORAL AREAS OF COLWOOD, LANGFORD AND METCHOSIN), PLANNING AREA No. 2.

The Board of the Capital Regional District in open meeting assembled, enacts as follows:

1. Former B.C. Regulation No. 20/67 is amended as follows:

By deleting from the Motel Zone and adding to the General Commercial Zone Lot A, Section 1, Plan 16750, Esquimalt Land District, shaded on Plan 59 attached and forming part of this by-law.

The above by-law may be viewed during normal working hours, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday inclusive, holidays excepted, at the offices of the Capital Regional District, 524 Yates Street, Victoria, B.C.

Dennis A. Young,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Music of early Germany is the theme of another Thursday concert at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

The performers will be James Kennedy, baroque flute, recorder and guitar, and a consort consisting of Stacey Boal, violin, viola and recorder, Ann Crose, harpsichord, and Glen Fast, baroque flute and recorder.

Compositions by the sons of J.S. Bach and their contemporaries including a trio sonata by J.J. Quantz, Canon in D Major by Johann Pachelbel and Trio by C.P.E. Bach, comprise the program. The G minor Sonata for harpsichord obligato and flute attributed to J.S. Bach and a suite of 18th-century pieces of baroque guitar, are among highlights.

Gallery doors open at 7:30 p.m. and admission is 50 cents to non-gallery members. The concert is jointly sponsored by the gallery and Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Organist, Brass Group In Recital

The sounds of brass and organ will fill St. John's Anglican Church on Quadra Street Sunday evening for a recital featuring members of the professional Western Brass Quintet and organist Edward Norman.

The Western Brass is an ensemble becoming widely known in B.C. Most of the members also constitute the present outstanding brass section of Victoria Symphony. Norman is much sought after both as a keyboard soloist and accompanist here and in Vancouver.

They will perform a program of music by Bach, Gabrieli and other baroque composers, together with more recent works.

There is no charge for the 8 p.m. concert. A collection will be taken.

Computer Mind Reels Off Answers

NEW YORK (NYT) — She forgot, momentarily, that she had visited the United States once before, some 20 years ago, but she could give you the cube root of 188,132,517 — or almost any other number — in the time it took to ask the question.

If you gave her any date in the last century she would tell you what day of the week it fell on. In seconds, she added five rows of eight-digit numbers and then multiplied the result by any five-digit number of your choice. All in her head. Shakuntala Devi, a mathematical prodigy from Bangalore, India, was in town.

Mrs. Devi's demonstration of her ability to quickly solve in her head mathematical problems involving addition, multiplication and division, using alogorithms — mental mathematical shortcuts that even she cannot explain — was one she has made hundreds of times in many parts of the world.

Standing a few feet from the State Bank of India's Burroughs Model 1700 computers, which were used to pose questions and verify her answers, Mrs. Devi, who has difficulty remembering her birth date, explained her capabilities.

"I have to start with the simple problems first," she told the banking employees. The first query, asking for the cube root of 13,824, was answered in a flash: "Twenty-four," she said.

Then came larger numberrs: The cube root of 188,132,517? "Five hundred seventy-three." An assistant bank manager manipulated an electronic calculator. "Correct," he said.

Then came lines of eight and nine-digit numbers, which were added and then multiplied by a large number. Answers came in seconds.

"What day of the week was Sept. 2, 1951?" "Sunday," came the correct response.

Mrs. Devi said in an interview that when she was 6 she discovered that she had the ability to do complicated math problems. Her father then sent her around India to give demonstrations of her abilities to make money for her family.

SHAKUNTALA DEVI . . . fast answers

Mrs. Devi is now on a tour of the eastern United States, hoping to sell a manuscript on mathematical shortcuts to a publisher.

According to mathematical scientists, Mrs. Devi's gift as a numerical math prodigy is not unique and has no relation to the science of mathematics.

Vietnamese Accused of Plotting Thailand's Fall

By LEWIS SIMONS
Washington Post

NAKHON PHANOM, Thailand — Scores of Vietnamese refugees who fled to Thailand more than 30 years ago to escape the fury of war are being jailed for allegedly operating a complex, nationwide shadow government intended to merge Thailand with a greater Indochina state.

The arrests, which are continuing, have drawn bitter propaganda blasts from the Communist government in Hanoi. Some Western political observers fear Vietnam will soon respond by increasing its support of Thailand's smoldering Communist insurgency. But authorities here in the insurgency-riddled northeast believe the risk is worth taking.

Whether the security threat the Vietnamese refugees represent is being exaggerated or not, Thais have long feared and disliked the Vietnamese among them.

Industrious and frugal, a number of them have established themselves as businessmen and farmers. They have also remained clannish and, unlike the large overseas Chinese community in Thailand, very few Vietnamese have married Thais or otherwise attempted to assimilate.

The Vietnamese refugees say they want to be allowed to return to their homeland, but what they're really trying to do is integrate Thailand into a single Indochina, say government officials.

The refugees insist that they want only to go home. Northwest of here, at the Nong Khai jail, Tien le Dinh, one of 20 Vietnamese men arrested on Oct. 24, said in an interview through the bars of their communal cell: "I left Hanoi in 1942. Now that the fighting is over, I want to go back. We all want to go back. Vietnam is our home. None of us has anything to do with politics. We're just waiting and hoping to be repatriated."

In a tiny general store in Nakhon Phanom's muddy main business street, Vo Van Dang poured shot glasses of home-brewed liquor for customers at the equivalent of 5 cents apiece and sold single cigarettes.

"I'm frightened," he said. "They seem to be arresting us just because we're Vietnamese. Nothing else." Dang said he has lived here since leaving Hanoi in 1946—and would like to go back home to die. "All my family is now dead and I want to live out my life on Vietnamese soil," he said.

The slender Dang laughed bitterly when asked whether he made contributions to Vietnam or to local insurgents. "Look at me, look at my shop," he replied. "I can barely feed myself."

Officials tell a different story. The entire Vietnamese community, they say, was taxed regularly and they accounted for milions of dollars a year flowing back to Hanoi.

"They're great organizers, the Vietnamese," says one official. "They have an administration with a central committee in every village and town and seven at the district level. Sometimes even at the province level.

"Each administration has five or six committees, for education, culture, welfare, security, information and administration. The intelligence and information committees are usually the largest and most important. Each community elects a leader, but he's just the front man for the shadow leader.

"Every member of the community must make regular contributions. It's a tax. On special occasions, like Ho Chi Minh's birthday, they're taxed higher amounts. In February, during the Vietnamese new year, they have 'Feed the Army Day' and this is when they must make a very large donation . . .

"Some of the money isn't sent out of Thailand, but is used here for subversion, to buy drugs and other supplies, for example. Another way the money is used against the Thai government is for training insurgents in Vietnam and Laos."

The official said that when police recently arrested nine local Vietnamese, they found "many U.S.-made maps of strategic areas in Thailand, Laos and Vietnam." He added that so far, only "leaders" of the Vietnamese community had been arrested but "I'm afraid the real leaders fled as soon as the military took power in Bangkok."

Before the toppling of the democratically elected government of Prime Minister Seni Pramoj on Oct. 6, talks had been set between Thailand and Vietnam on repatriating some of the estimated 60,000 French-era Vietnamese refugees —as distinct from the additional thousands who have continued to flee here since the 1974 Communist victory in Vietnam.

Now, with the atmosphere between the two governments growing more acerbic every day, the chances for talks are diminishing swiftly.

The Thai government, which has made the battle against communism its major pillar, has shown no signs of halting the arrests or releasing any of the prisoners, whether any evidence exists against individuals or not. Under the government's sweeping constitutional powers about 100 in all are now imprisoned.

In a heated reply to a Hanoi radio broadcast that described the new Thai rulers as "Nazi," the Thai government warned that it intends to arrest more Vietnamese suspected of anti-national activities.

Intelligence, police and civil officials in half a dozen northeastern towns with major Vietnamese populations said that over the years they had gathered evidence that the Vietnamese were actively supporting Vietnam's military efforts as well as Thailands own Communist insurgents.

Saanich Community Plan in 18 Months

It will be at least 18 months before Saanich's community plan is finalized, council was told Tuesday.

At a special meeting called to outline how the plan will be drawn up, assistant municipal planner Tom Jenkinson said the regional district has agreed to extend the Nov. 27 deadline.

A "broad brush" plan is expected to be submitted to the regional district in four months but it will be at least 18 months before every detail is finalized.

"I am more concerned about ideal guidelines than I am in deadlines," municipal planner Gil Laurenson told the council. "The plan has been delayed because of two basic requirements; the economic study (completed by Ward and Associates of Vancouver this spring) and the environment study completed this summer."

Jenkinson said there are "roughly 11 local areas and 28 neighborhoods" in the municipality. Residents in these districts will be consulted before the plan is finalized.

The assistant planner presented council with a list of 13 problems and 13 goals designed to solve these problems.

There will be another special meeting at 7 p.m. next Tuesday at which the council will endorse or amend Jenkinson's proposals before asking for a review of them by Saanich ratepayers.

After hearing from the ratepayers, the council will set policy on how the plan should be proceeded with. The next step will be study of the community plan draft by council.

When this is completed a series of public meetings is planned for ratepayers' imput.

Laurenson said the goals presented Tuesday are "idealistic" and non-controversial.

Ald. David Paterson agreed, "Some of these must be called motherhood issues. I'm concerned about the taxpayers' ability to pay for these amenities of life. We must work with other levels of senior governments on the cost-sharing process."

Among the 13 goals presented by Jenkinson are:—

—Environment: Encourage land use that is compatible with the environment, as well as protecting the coastline and beaches from unsuitable development.

—Economy: To assure that Saanich will share in regional economic development and obtain employment opportunities near homes.

—Agriculture: To encourage private individual ownership of farmland and wise agricultural practices.

—Transportation: To recognize the relationship between land use and transportation systems; encourage the upgrading of public transit serving Saanich, as well as bikeways, footpaths, and other modes of transportation, including the automobile.

—Housing: To encourage provision of a variety of housing types, designs and sizes at a reasonable cost, noting the supply of special housing for the elderly and handicapped is inadequate.

—Parks and recreation: To improve public access to beaches, develop a system of footpaths between parks, schools and greenbelts; acquire and maintain adequate park acreage for future growth.

—Municipal services: To encourage conservation of water, reclaiming and recycling of waste, and treatment of sewage. Questioned by Ald. Sandy Noel, Jenkinson conceded this included a sewage treatment plant "down the road 15 to 20 years."

—Land use: The planning of "compact communities."

—Community Perspective: Participation of residents in the community planning process.

—Growth management: To manage growth so as to minimize disruption of the social, economic and environmental needs and land use patterns in Saanich.

—Urban form: To encourage the preservation of distinctive characteristics of each neighborhood.

—Government: To have local government that is receptive and responsive to the goals, needs and desires of all residents.

VETO BY LORDS BLOW TO LABOR

LONDON (Reuter) — The House of Lords stood firm Tuesday and defeated the government on a key clause in a controversial bill to nationalize Britain's aircraft and shipbuilding industries.

By 144 votes to 51, the Lords upheld an earlier decision, against the wishes of the Labor administration, to exclude 12 ship-repairing firms from the measure.

The defeat Tuesday is the second major setback to the government's legislative program in the last week. Abstentions last Wednesday by two Labor members in the House of Commons meant that the government lost a crucial vote on a bill to extend the rights of longshoremen to inland cargo-handling jobs.

This doc bill will become law as it stands, a shadow of what the government had intended, and the same fate now may await the nationalization measure.

The only way ministers can get it on the statue book before the end of the current parliamentary session next week will be to accept the decision of the non-elected House of Lords.

The alternative is to invoke the Parliament Act to the next session beginning Nov. 24.

Pakistan to Get 110 U.S. Planes

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. defence department has recommended that Washington sell 110 A-7 light bombers to Pakistan to protect its border with India, Pentagon officials have confirmed.

Deputy defence secretary William Clements approved the military's recommendation last week and forwarded it the State Department for action.

Chances of state going along with the A-7 sales are good if recent reports prove out that Pakistan is backing out of the deal to buy a nuclear fuel re-processing plant from France.

Oil Spill Protection All Up in the Air . . .

By AB KENT
Times Staff

If and when an oil tanker grounds in Juan de Fuca or Georgia Strait, the fate of our shores and wildlife literally will be left up in the air.

Winds, rather than tides and currents, will be the chief influence on any crude oil or petroleum product in these exposed waters, say two senior officers of the department of environment.

And any prediction of wind force and direction is limited to short periods and subject to intermittent variation, unlike the more accurate plotting of tide and current movements over a longer period.

"The number one factor is the wind," said Dr. Bill English, deputy director general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences.

He was commenting on a statement by zoologist Dr. Mike Healey, of the Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo, who is guiding research into environmental management of Georgia Strait.

"One of these days, certain as the sunrise, there will be major oil spill in Georgia Strait," Healey wrote in the B.C. Technologist, the journal of the Society of Engineering Technologists of B.C.

"When a spill occurs it is imperative that we know where the oil will go and how fast. Right now we would be unable to predict with any accuracy where floating oil would go, even if we had the technology to clean it up properly."

Regional director Jack Mathieson, of the atmospheric environment service in Vancouver, said his scientific services unit has a research program considering the mixing effects of tides, currents and winds.

The study group also makes use of data obtained from experience in dealing with oil spills elsewhere.

"It is a complex thing," Mathieson said.

"The relationships are not clearly understood and our ability to predict is not well developed."

He said the work is given priority within the time and money available, and the department attaches great importance to the subject, "because if we have a spill, we get involved in the cleanup.

"But it's a subject not well understood anywhere."

Healey said the chance of a spill is a calculated risk. "Conflict arises when we attempt to determine an acceptable level of risk, and I think we can legitimately ask whether the benefits accruing from the proposed west coast tanker route for Prudhoe Bay oil are worth the risk, especially if the southern terminus is to be Puget Sound."

Marine birds and the plant and animal life of estuaries would be hardest hit by the contamination by a major oil spill drifting uncontrolled in Georgia Strait, said Healey.

He referred to the Fraser River lowlands, the other major estuaries and inlets of the Lower Mainland from Squamish to Powell River, and all the tidal flats associated with the east coast watershed of Vancouver Island from Esquimalt Harbor to Campbell River.

Healey said a knowledge of currents is important to the design of rational environmental management models. Interaction of water flow and land masses around the shores of the strait determines the rate of scouring and sediment deposit and the kinds of beaches, in turn affecting the types of wildlife and their food supply.

English said there are various numerical models which predict surface water movement with accuracy, provided the wind factor is known.

He said a relatively light wind can override the effects of tide and current on a dispersing spill.

For the immediate future, English considers Juan de Fuca Strait to be in greater jeopardy from a potential oil spill than Georgia Strait.

He noted, as did Healey, that consideration is being given to more seaward oil tanker terminuses, such as Por Angeles, Neah Bay and Gray's Harbor, which could spare Georgia Srait from risk.

Oceanographer Allen Milne concurs with the view that atmospheric circulation would have more bearing on oil movement than water circulation, unless there were a dead calm.

Donors Over Goal

Blood donors surpassed the target again Tuesday, with 177 turning out at Red Cross House to bring the week's total to 351.

Objective for the first two days of the week-long campaign in Greater Victoria was 160 donors daily.

Today's clinic is at the Interurban campus of Camosun College, 4461 Interurban Rd., from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. On Friday the last clinic is at Victoria General Hospital nurses' residence, 841 Collinson, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Pursuant to Section 766AA of the Municipal Act, the following synopsis of By-law No. 316, cited as "B.C. Regulation No. 103/60 Amendment By-law No. 12, Planning Area No. 2, 1976", is hereby published

CAPITAL REGIONAL DISTRICT

A BY-LAW TO AMEND FORMER B.C. REGULATION NO. 103/60 FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A DEVELOPMENT AREA IN PLANNING AREA NO. 2

The Board of the Capital Regional District in open meeting assembled and pursuant to Section 798A of the Municipal Act, enacts as follows:

1. Former B.C. Regulation No. 103/60 is amended as follows:

That part of the Electoral Area of View Royal described in Section 1.01 of the said B.C. Regulation No. 103/60 shaded on Plan number 12, attached to and made part of this By-law, is hereby designated a Development Area.

The above by-law may be viewed during normal working hours, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday inclusive, holidays excepted, at the offices of the Capital Regional District, 524 Yates Street, Victoria, B.C.

Towing Firms Bid for Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two auto towing companies are bidding for the city's new towing contract, which takes effect next month.

The contract includes towing of cars from streets for such offences as illegal parking.

At present, basic rate for towing of private cars under the city contract is $10.50.

Under the bids received Monday, Unitow submitted a rate of $17, while Buster's submitted a number of alternatives, with rates ranging from $15 to $23 over a three-year contract.

Oak Bay Wants Status Quo

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Candidates for Oak Bay council in Saturday's election made it clear Tuesday night they want to maintain the status quo.

They supported policies of financial restraint and maintaining the residential character of the municipality.

The six candidates for four seats on council made their statements and fielded questions before 52 residents at the all-candidates meeting in the municipal hall sponsored by the Oak Bay branch of the Association of Women Electros.

Asked why council hasn't called a public meeting on an official community plan, Ald. John Goult said Oak Bay hasn't produced one.

But the plan will essentially be "nothing more than a statement of present zoning policy."

Under the Capital Regional District's official plan, he said, Oak Bay must accommodate an extra 4,000 people over the next 20 years and "our planner said we can meet that with no difficulty."

He said the Oak Bay plan will come before council, perhaps at its next meeting.

Goult said there are two issues in the election: Money, in which he urged continuing efforts to improve municipal efficiency, and the "threat to municipal independence inherent in the Bawlf report," a report by Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf.

Goult said Bawlf was a local developer until his election as a Socred MLA and "in essence it's a Magna Carta for developers" because the report, if ever implemented, would wipe out land-use contracts and many restrictions municipalities have over zoning.

Jacqueline Sellgren said while she is relatively new to the area, she has spent the last six months attending council and committee meetings.

She said she wants to see minutes of council meetings made public at the municipal hall and library, to have citizens aware of what is happening whether it is a street light or a major zoning, encourage people to participate in meetings before events have gone too far and cannot be turned back.

While favoring keeping housing as it is, she supported the "possible" duplexing or having three or four families in the largest houses "so we can make housing more affordable."

Ald. Shirley Dowell, who said council minutes are available at municipal hall for the public, said council should do a better job in explaining bylaws as they are dealt with by council.

She favored the present zoning, no spot zoning, no high-rises, and while "hold the line on a tax increase may be unrealistic, four per cent is all I'd vote for."

Ald. Doug Watts said he supported major projects like the recreation centre in the past but "now we have reached the point where we must change the emphasis. Now we have to take a different approach, now we have to exercise real restraint in spending."

At the same time, he said provincial grants to Oak Bay have declined from 11.2 per cent of municipal and school expenditures in 1972 to 8.89 per cent last year.

He wanted to maintain pressure on the provincial governmenb to pay a grant in lieu of taxes to Oak Bay for the University of Victoria, which he said should be around $300,000 "or something in the order of five mills."

John Buckley began by saying he didn't have a platform but said "we must hold the line on costs" and "in the long run I'd like to see school costs taken off homes."

He also urged a start to develop long-range programs for proper sewage disposal, including an end to dumping raw sewage into the sea. He described present plans as patchwork.

He also wants to retain the "individual character of Oak Bay."

Neil Swainson said a strong position on financial restraint "makes sense."

"It is my hope to do everything to maintain the distinctive and essentially residential nature of Oak Bay."

"I've seen about 30 apartments built in Oak Bay and I think we must ask ourselves if we want another 30 and another 30," he said, although adding "I am not running on an anti-apartment campaign."

At another point, he said "I hope we don't have another 4,000 people here, in four or 24 years." While people couldn't be stopped from coming, he said new towns should be built elsewhere in B.C.

Dowell, Goult, Sellgren and Watts are running for the three two-year aldermanic vacancies.

Buckley and Swainson are running for the single one-year aldermanic vacancy, created by the mid-term resignation of Ald. Doug McLelland.

WORK on the $12 million ministry of transport base continues at the former Victoria Machinery Depot property on Dallas Road. Here, surcharge (fill) is being dumped in preparation for a shops complex to be built next fall. Hunter Construction of Victoria has received a $509,412 contract to build a helicopter hanger and pad. The base is scheduled to be operational by 1979.

Arbitration Hearing On Police Pay Begins

An arbitration hearing began today to determine the 1976 wage contract for Saanich policemen.

Sgt. David Brown, secretary-treasurer of the 102-member Saanich Police Association, said the hearing is expected to take three days but may last until Saturday.

The arbitrator, mutually agreed upon by both parties, is Victoria lawyer Ian Stewart.

The B.C. Labor Code allows a police union, when normal collective bargaining has failed, to give notice to the employer that the dispute will be resolved by arbitration.

The code states that the terms and conditions settled by the arbitrator shall be binding on both parties "except to the extent to which the parties agree to vary any or all of them."

Saanich policemen voted unanimously Oct. 5 to reject the municipal police board's offer of a 7.91 per cent increase in a one-year contract, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The police association said the offer would leave the Saanich force one of the five lowest paid west of Ontario. The police have asked for a 12-per-cent increase.

In July, 1975, the policemen ratified a two-year agreement retroactive to Jan. 1, 1975.

However, the wages were effective only for one year and were open for negotiation Jan. 1.

When the policemen ratified their contract in 1975, they became one of the highest paid forces in Canada.

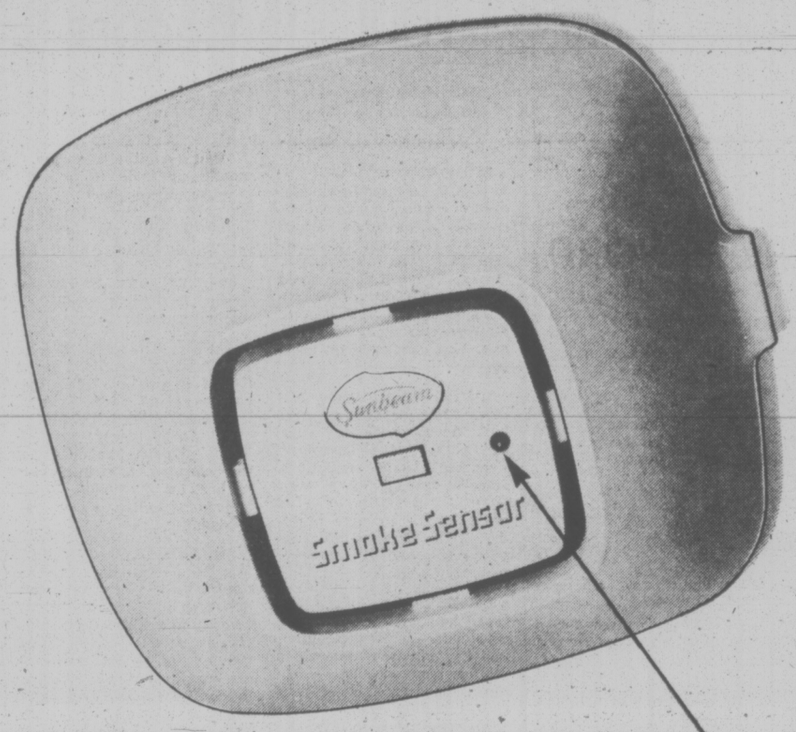
Sleep more peacefully tonight with the Sunbeam Smoke Sensor alarm system



...its flashing power signal is just one of seven advanced safety features

Why every home should have a smoke detector

Firefighters and fire prevention authorities all recommend the use of smoke detectors in private homes.

The reason: most fire victims die of asphyxiation, not burns. And close to half, these experts say, might be saved by early warning of fire.

The smoke detector's job is to provide this early warning—before smoke, flame or fumes are even apparent. And that's how a dependable detector can give you almost priceless peace of mind.

Which detector to choose

With so many smoke detectors available, how do you choose? These facts might help you.

The sooner your smoke detector is able to sense combustion and sound the alarm, the more time you and your family have to escape...and the more faith you can put in it. You want a unit as reliable as modern science can make it, with every possible check and countercheck built in.

Sunbeam safety facts

The new Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm system is engineered with the seven advanced performance features listed here. They're well worth studying.

Above all, note the Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm uses a "dual ionization" system. It senses combustion at the earliest stage of fire—often before you can see or smell smoke—to give you the earliest possible warning.

Inconspicuous, easy to install

The Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm system mounts unobtrusively on your ceiling. Modern, neatly styled in soft white, it blends with any decor. You can install it yourself with just two screws; no wiring or special hardware is needed.

Consider all the safety features Sunbeam offers

Test button. Tests the entire system: battery, circuit, sensing chambers, alarm.
Low-battery signal. Sounds intermittent warning for 7 days when battery is low.
Operating light. 60-second repeating light shows unit is getting power.
Alarm. 85-decibel horn gives powerful "wake-up" alarm.
Dual ionization. Accurate, stable, sensitive to earliest stage of combustion.
Solid state. Advanced circuitry is trouble-free, dependable.
Battery operated. Self-contained, works even when house power fails.
Unit comes complete with special, 12.6-volt Mallory Duracell® battery.

Make this your season for family safety

Consider the months ahead...the season for home heating, enjoying the fireplace, entertaining, Christmas trees and lights.

What wiser time to safeguard your family with the Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm system. For under $50, including battery, it could be one of the best investments in family security you'll ever make.

Now at department, hardware, appliance, auto supply stores and home building centres.

The practice of deception is seldom employed successfully by the defenders, for a very simple reason: a deceptive play made by a defender, having as its aim the tricking of declarer, more frequently misleads the deceiver's partner, with the result that a losing line of play comes into being. But, on occasion, a defender elects to gamble out a deceptive play, hoping that his gamble will pay off. In today's deal, East's deceptive play paid a dividend.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	3 ◇
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

On West's opening lead of the diamond king East did not make the normal play of the deuce. Instead, he followed suit with the eight-spot. To trick two West led the diamond ace, on which East dropped the deuce. In the minds of both West and South, there was no doubt but that East had initiated (and completed) a high-low signal, indicating that he possessed no more diamonds; and that he wanted West to lead a third diamond to trick three.

So, to trick three, West led a third diamond. Declarer, concerned over the possibility of East trumping this lead with the nine of hearts, which would force declarer to overtrump with the ace, made sure that this wouldn't happen: he ruffed the third diamond lead with the board's ten-spot — as East nonchalantly followed suit with the three of diamonds. South discarded a club on this trick.

Although declarer didn't know it at this point, his contract had just flown out the window. When, to trick four, declarer led dummy's queen of trumps, East played the five, with the queen winning the trick. But when the jack of trumps was led next, East covered with the king, South's ace taking the trick. East's nine of trumps was now supreme. So the defenders ended up making two diamond tricks, one trump, and the ace of clubs.

Of course if East had not falsecarded, and West had not made his third diamond lead which declarer naturally trumped with dummy's ten, repeated finesses against East's king of trumps would have avoided the loss of a trump trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, November 18

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on ties, legal commitments, emotional responses, attention to partner or mate. You gain wider recognition, even acceptance. Money, love and power could be involved. Older person provides some practical lessons. Be wise enough to be receptive. You can learn from experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message for valid hint. Accept added pressure as "part of the territory." Keep diet, health resolutions. Someone wants you to step down — it is mostly a case of envy. Key is to sight priorities, to be firm, to insist on your rights and to stop being foolishly "polite."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with changes, creative activity, children, intensified relationships, speculative ventures, the imprinting of your style. Get to heart of matters; be independent in thought; action. Emphasize originality. Leo plays key role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): What had been the status quo could be overturned. Be ready and willing to chuck out what is outmoded, costly, "smoky." You are more than capable of streamline, of quality, of modern, of solid structure minus stodgy. You'll see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ideas are tested — Nothing is lukewarm. You geet answers, results — it is hot or cold, workable or a farce. Key is to be confident, to stand by principles. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Aquarius, Cancer persons figure prominently. Short trip, in connection with relative, may be on agenda. Don't be intimidated by "hallowed" halls.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on romantic interlude, fulfilment, increase in popularity, making peace at home, purchasing gift for loved one. Genuine bargain in luxury item is available. Change routine. Dining out might be key to fresh, productive dialogue. Act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Insist on perceiving goal. Refuse to run in circles. Be positive about facts — check between the lines. Be aware of fine print. Steer clear of wishful thinking that leads to self-deception. You might be in line for promotion. Show willingness to handle more responsibility.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your creativity surges to forefront — you take what had been a vision, and transform it to reality. Capricorn, Cancer persons could figure prominently. Accent on travel, study, spiritual insights, the written word. You close communication gap. You gain recognition overlooked in past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Reject the superficial. Aim for quality — verify findings. Finish what you start. Steer clear of idle threats. Maintain balance, principles and integrity. Aries, Libra could be in picture. Check contract for "trick clause."

IF NOVEMBER 18th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are impulsive, creative, artistic, attracted to theater and law. Aries, libra persons play imporant roles in your life. Be ready now to "recover" from setback suffered earlier this year. You will be back on your feet, emotional wound healed, prestige restored. You'll have more money, too. If single, you marry in 1977. Married or single, you have more responsibility and greater reward potential.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"A lot of people don't smoke these days," said Eddie. "And men at that."

Susan smiled. "I know. We did a survey on smoking and drinking at the office last week. One third of the staff don't smoke, one quarter don't drink, 21 drink and smoke, and one-sixth do neither."

How many did the survey cover?

Machines, Not People, Shielded in N-War

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. says it has tapped the Soviet Union's civil defence program to develop a system to protect its industrial machinery from a thermonuclear attack and has tested the plan by using Soviet defence manuals.

T. K. Jones, Boeing's program and product evaluation manager, says in a report that the protection method works if industrial plants have 48 hours to prepare for an attack. However, the company said it had not yet found a way to protect the workers who would have to implement the protective measures.

George Weiss, one of two Boeing representatives in Washington, said Tuesday that the aerospace firm and federal government used conventional explosives to test the theory of the Soviet Union's civil defence program that machinery can be protected through use of plastic foam, metal chips, balsa wood and dirt or sandbags.

Weiss said tests were conducted using Soviet civil defence manuals as a guide.

"They used high explosives to create overpressure," or the kind of shock wave that would be caused by a thermonuclear explosion, Weiss said. "They did some testing on what the Soviets are doing inside the Soviet Union to protect their factories. They used Soviet manuals."

Weiss said he did not know how the company obtained the manuals. He said they are "commonly available inside Russia."

Weiss said the theory was not tested with nuclear weapons because that was not considered necessary.

The protection method involves supporting machines and equipment on polyurethane foam and covering them at the first sign of attack with plastic foam, metal chips, balsa wood, dirt or sandbags.

Boeing estimates that all the nation's industrial machinery could be partially protected for between $1.2 billion and $1.5 billion.

Boeing itself could resume airplane production 12 weeks after a nuclear attack if its machinery is protected in the Soviet manner, the report by Jones said.

Jones criticized "the widespread notion that nuclear war would be the end of all mankind . . ." But he said if the Soviets execute the defence plan while the United States does not, "the consequences to the United States of escalation to nuclear war would be disastrous while consequences might be tolerable to the Soviet Union."

He said the Soviet Union could recover in "no more than 2 to 4 years," while the United States would need 12 years to recover.

Pleas Failed: Son Missed Mom's Death

ALAMEDA, Calif. (UPI) — A governor's plea for "an act of mercy" and a dying woman's last wish were not enough to snip the red tape of bureaucracy.

Efforts to get Phillip Millard a 24-hour emergency furlough from a Mexico City prison ended when his mother died of cancer before dawn Tuesday in her hospital bed.

Nurses said Mrs. Isabel Millard, 68, a retired teacher, "hung on to the end" in hopes of seeing her son, who will probably be released on parole from Mexico City's Santa Maria prison in two weeks.

Millard, 32, a truck driver, was jailed three years ago on a charge of cocaine smuggling. He was sentenced to 6½ years.

Millard was told of his mother's death by his sister, Carolyn Johnson, who visited him in prison.

Finger Lickin' Iraqi Deals

BAGHDAD (WP) — North Americans visiting Iraq this year will be able to eat southern-fried chicken, Baghdad style, thanks to one of the largest poultry export sales in U.S. history.

In April, the National Broiler Market Association of Jackson, Miss., signed a $33 million contract to supply Iraq with 35,000 metric tons of frozen chicken. The first batch of birds has already arrived.

The chicken sale is one of several recently signed contracts that have made 1976 a record year for U.S.-Iraqui trade. Despite the absence of formal diplomatic relations between the two nations, commercial trade has increased dramatically in the past two years.

Since the Baghdad government ended its boycott of most goods and services from the United States in 1973, U.S. exports to Iraq have risen from $55.9 million that year to $310 million in 1975. U.S. sales to Iraq are expected to total between $400 million and $500 million by the end of this year. The U.S. trade has cut into sales by West Germany and Japan, which accounted for nearly 40 per cent of Iraq's $5 billion worth of imports in 1975. Soviet economic presence in Iraq is also declining. Imports from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, once dominant suppliers, slipped to 10 per cent last year.

Some 22 American companies now have branches or offices in Iraq, and U.S. companies have made major sales of wheat, rice, aircraft, dredges, oil rigs and a fairly wide range of industrial, construction and transport equipment.

This year, two major contracts, in addition to the chicken sale, boosted American trade with the Baathist party-ruled government of Iraq. In February, Iraq signed a contract with the Lummus Corp. of New Jersey and a West German partner for the design and construction of a $1.1 billion petrochemical complex near Basra — the largest single contract ever signed by the government of Iraq. The project will ultimately require the presence of 3,000 foreigners.

ABORTIONS TOPS

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time ever, the number of legal abortions obtained by Washington residents last year exceeded the number of births, according to figures compiled by the District of Columbia's department of human resources.

The department said about 85 per cent of the abortions were paid for by the government, either at private hospitals and clinics through the Medicaid program or at the city's free public hospital, D.C. General.

Officials of Planned Parenthood and federal officials who compile abortion statistics said Washington is the first major American city where abortions performed on residents apparently outnumber births.

Plant Arrangements on Display

The Victoria Flower Arrangers' Guild has worthily expanded the early efforts of local gardeners who happily arranged lovely garden flowers for horticultural shows back in the first half of this century.

During those years visitors from American cities greatly admired our flowers but deplored our ideas (or lack of ideas) for their use in decorating our homes.

Progress along this line will readily be seen when viewing the Holiday Magic Show on Friday and Saturday (Nov. 19 and 20) this week.

The members of the Arrangers' Guild call this a show of Christmas Arrangement Ideas. Judging from other years, I would say the subtitle is well chosen. If an arrangement does not appeal to you as displayed, it will contain either a design theme that you like, or some item of material used will give you ideas to build into an arrangement of your own.

While much of the material used in the Holiday Magic Show is from living plants — foliage, berries, and even flowers fo the season — the arrangers have no limits.

Artificial aids, dried flowers, color-sprayed berries and leaves, anything and everything may appear, but you can be sure its use is effective.

Sometimes a half hour can be spent at such a show trying to figure the identity of some part of an arrangement. If the puzzle still remains, question an attending member whose answer will probably make you reassess your powers of observastion. Who didn't you think of that before?

Holiday Magic Show of Christmas Arrangement Ideas can be seen in the First United Church Fellowship Hall, 932 Balmoral Road, off Quadra Street, just north of Pandora Street, Friday (Nov. 19) the doors will be open from 1 to 9 p.m., Saturday (Nov. 20) from 10 a.h. to 8 p.m.

This is one of the many shows involving plants that will appeal to apartment dwellers just as much as to gardeners since a garden is not a necessity for the designing of these Christmas ideas. During the next few weeks, evergreen branches and similar decorations will be seen in florists' displays, offering pieces of all sizes for working into one's own designs. Or friends with gardens or native woodland will be a source for the small amount you may need.

If you have always found your artistic senses run suddenly dry when faced with wanting a really spectacular arrangement to stun Christmas visitors, visit this delightful show on Friday and Saturday. Refreshments will be available so there is no need to rush. You can sit down and think over what you see. You can get advice from members as to methods of preserving plant material for use, and you will get an eyeful of beauty.

Admission is one dollar, and the Guild makes a substantial donation to a local organization from proceeds after each event.

From miniature arrangements to six-footers, the colors and the designs will delight you. In November can you ask for more?

Trade? University

Yes, this is an honest-to goodness Trade, not a "guaranteed sale." My vendor desires a 3-bedroom full basement home in the Gordon Head-K Mart area. Will trade his 2-bedroom corner suite for same. His is one of the finest in the building with lovely views, large living room and master bedroom, own washer and dryer and covered parking. If you want a condominium, don't miss this one.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number of your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Teachers Cite CoL In Plea for 11.5%

Victoria teachers will barely be holding their own against the rising cost of living even if they're granted an 11.5 per cent pay increase, says Wayne Erickson, chairman of the teachers' agreements committee.

That's why the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association's 1,400 members are willing to "put our case before an arbitration board."

Talks between the district and teachers broke off Monday over the salary issue. Teachers wanted the 11.5 per cent incease and the board was offering eight per cent.

A three-man arbitration board will be formed and will hand down its decision before Dec. 31.

Erickson said the Victoria teachers' pay scale is the lowest in the province. At a recent general meeting, teachers completely rejected the district's eight per cent offer.

The cost of living in Vancouver increased 9.5 per cent from September, 1975, to September, 1976, he said. The extra two per cent teachers are after is for the productiyity factor usually allowed by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

Cost of living figures are not available for Victoria, Erickson said, but because of transportation costs, to the Island, there is no doubt that it is higher than Vancouver.

The reason teachers are not asking for more to compensate for this is because there is no documented proof of a higher cost of living here, Erickson said.

Meanwhile, both Sooke and Saanich districts seem close to contract settlements.

Sooke teachers accepted an eight per cent across-the-board offer from the district's negotiating committee. All that is needed now is board of trustee ratification, and this is expected to pass without difficulty.

Saanich teachers agreed to 7.49 per cent on basic salaries plus fringe benefits that bring the total package to the eight per cent allowable under the second year AIB guidelines.

Board chairman Dr. Gerry Kristianson said he was pleased the district's teachers stayed within the AIB guidelines and avoided costly arbitration.

Both Erickson and president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation Bill Broadley denied a charge by vice-chairman of the Victoria school district Susan Brice that teahcers' demands were being "orchestrated across the province.

"I don't know how she got that impression" Erickson said, adding that he didn't know of another Teachers' association in the province asking for 11.5 per cent.

Broadley said that of 78 district across the province, 39 had reached agreements and 39 have gone to arbitration.

He said teachers had avoided orchestration.

District 61 appointed Noel Paget as its representative on the arbitration board. Erickson said the teachers' appointee should be known in a week or 10 days.

The two representatives will then choose a third neutral party to chair the board.

Victoria Clinics For Flu Shots 85% Booked

Clinics in Greater Victoria Friday and Saturday to administer flu vaccine are 85 per cent full on a pre-register basis, the regional health officer said today.

Dr. Allan Arneil said it is still possible for those eligible — people 65 and over and others with a chronic condition which would be aggravated by catching the flu — to pre-register Thusday.

Because of the potential threat of a swine flu outbreak, the federal government orgainized a cross-country immunization program this year and the first 11,500 dose available locally will be dispensed at the two days of clinics.

The vaccine being offered will protect against both Swine flu and the A Victoria strain. Another 18,000 doses for the Capital district are expected early in December. There is no charge for the shots.

The regional community health services organized the pre-registration for the first clinics to eliminate line-ups for the elderly and others whose health is impaired.

Arneil said everyone who has pre-registered is assured of getting the vaccine and people not pre-registered who appear at the clinics will have to wait and may get immunized if there is vaccine left over.

If the clinics do not use all the 11,500 doses, any remaining will be given to hospital patients or residents in some of the larger boarding homes who qualify.

The clinics will be held at nine locations in the Capital district, some of them on both Friday and Saturday. Four of them are already fully booked.

To pre-register Thursday, those eligible or anyone on their behalf can pick up the necessary form at the following locations, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Clinic locations and times:

In Victoria, at 1947 Cook St., from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday (fully booked) and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

At Ganges on Salt Spring Island, the health office on Rainbow Road from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday.

Arneil said there will be about 30 registered nurses working in the clinics Friday and about 25 on Saturday. At the Cook Street office the staff parking lot will be cleared for those coming to the clinic but it would help if those who can come by bus or park some distance away, he said.

The pre-registration forms allot a two-hour block for coming to the clinic and there is no need for everyone to come at the start because there will be ample vaccine. Anytime during the two hours is acceptable, he said.

Ecological Clowning At Belfry

A clown show sponsored by Heritage Canada under the title Fantasy National Park visits The Belfry on Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

The group's performance, originating in Ottawa, has been described as "humorous, touching, droll and urgent." Mime, puppets, skits and songs are used to present an ecological message.

Under the direction of Richard Pochinko, artistic director of Theatre Resource Centre in Ottawa, the play, conceived and written by the clowns themselves, explores human relationship with the rapidly deteriorating environment.

This is presented in an educational and entertaining manner designed for children but apealing to all ages.

The company comes here directly from a successful tour of Montreal, Charlottetown, Halifax, Edmonton and Frobisher Bay. Due to up-island commitments only one performance will be given in Victoria.

Tickets are $1 for children and $1.50 for adults and can be purchased at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone.

Nationalists Committed

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two militant Ukrainian nationalists were committed to psychiatric hospitals early this month, dissident sources said Tuesday.

The sources said the two Ukrainian nationalists were committed on grounds that they were "socially dangerous."

They were identified as Iossif Terelia, who was confined at Vinnitsa in the Ukraine, and Mikhail Kukavaka, who was confined at Mogilev in Byelorussia.

Terelia, who had spent 14 years in prisons, work camps and hospitals, and Kukavaka, who had six years in similar detention, were released by officials early this year.

HEARING SET IN MURDER

A preliminary hearing date of Jan. 24 was set today for a man charged with first-degree murder in the strangulation death of Alice Monique Dhillon.

John Edward Aitken, 29, of 508-707 Esquimalt Road, was charged with killing Mrs. Dhillon while commiting rape. Th body of the 30-year-old mother of three was found Sept. 9 in Esquimalt.

Hussein Crushes Siege, 7 Killed

Times News Services

AMMAN — King Hussein's shock troops crushed a four-hour siege today by gunmen in Amman's Intercontinental Hotel that took seven lives, a Jordanian spokesman said.

Three terrorists, two hotel employees and two soldiers were killed, the spokesman said. A fourth gunman was seriously wounded.

King Hussein personally ordered a final attack on the gunmen, who were holed up on the fourth floor of the hotel with an unknown number of hostages, the spokesman said.

"The king ordered that the operation be conducted with the minimum possible loss in lives, especially among the hotel guests."

None of the hotel guests was killed, the spokesman said.

The identity of the gunmen was not known. Some reports said they were Iranians and one may have been Japanese.

The four gunmen ran into the hotel lobby at 9:50 a.m. firing automatic weapons "to seize the hotel and hold guests hostage," Radio Amman said earlier.

Two cars were blown up during the first minutes of the attack.

Special troops of the Jordanian armed forces stormed the hotel lobby and pushed into the second and third floors, forcing the terrorists into the fourth floor where they blew up two rooms, sources said.

The security units forced the attackers from the first three floors of the eight-storey hotel, a main gathering place for Amman's leading political and business personalities.

Shots and explosions rang out and smoke billowed from the building as King Hussein's troops rushed to the area in trucks and helicopters.

Some troops stormed into the hotel lobby while others were landed on the roof.

It took the troops three hours to gain control of the lower floors of the hotel. The hotel was the scene of fierce fighting during the September, 1970, battles between Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian forces.

HOLIDAY CUT: $500 DAMAGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air Tuesday was ordered to pay $500 damages to a Maple Ridge, B.C., woman whose family missed a Hawaii-bound plane last Christmas because the airline had oversold the flight.

Small claims court Judge Nick Mussalem awarded the damages and $28 costs to Mrs. Dutchie Mathison.

Mrs. Mathison, her husband Thomas and two children arrived at the CP Air counter last December to catch the flight they had confirmed 11 months previously — and which CP Air had re-confirmed on Dec. 4.

"They told us (on Dec. 4) to be sure to enjoy flying CP Air," Mrs. Mathison said Tuesday.

"We waited in line and we were about 10 away from the waiting room when they announced that was all they could take. They said they were overbooked and we might as well go home and forget it — a holiday we had planned for more than a year."

Mrs. Mathison said she refused to leave and told airline workers she'd stay there until they got her another flight. CP Air later issued the family tickets for a Dec. 22 flight.

"So it ruined three days of our holiday," Mrs. Mathison said.

"And we had paid extra in the beginning, to get on a weekend flight."

Mrs. Mathison said at least 50 others were turned back from the same flight "and the CP Air people just didn't care, all they were concerned with was telling us to keep back and get out of the way."

60,000 DEAD

GENEVA (TNS) — About 60,000 people have been killed and 200,000 wounded in the Lebanese civil war, Ghassan Teuni, Lebanese information minister, said Tuesday. About 1,700,000 people need urgent help and many are maimed or handicapped, he told a news conference.

Economic Thump Forecast

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia economy will suffer the consequences in 1977 of "past excessive increases in wage rates and of the social legislation of recent years," a conference sponsored by the Association of Professional Economists of B.C. was told Tuesday. Herbert Grubel, professor of economics at Simon Fraser University in nearby Burnaby, told the economic outlook conference: "B.C. industry will be non-competitive, profits and investment will be low, net immigration will be negative, government revenues and expenditures will stagnate."

He referred to data which showed that average B.C. wage rates in manufacturing are $6.55 an hour, while the national average is $5.06 and in the United States, $4.81.

He said productivity was not likely to increase to offset the drain in wages and it would be a long time before the province's foreign competitors caught up with B.C. wage scales.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said today that indications are Canada's economy will lapse into recession by late next year or early 1978.

The Commerce Leading Indicator, the bank's quarterly index aimed at monitoring the economic performance, said a pause in the United States recovery and uncertainties over the federal anti-inflation program "have clearly jeopardized our recovery."

Fed to Fight Right to Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia labor leaders, suspicious of the provincial government's intentions, vowed unrelenting opposition Tuesday if Social Credit moves to introduce right-to-work legislation.

If such a bill is passed, workers "should go off their jobs and this province should be shut down tight until they back off," Gerry Stoney, president of the New Westminister Labor Council, said at the B.C. Federation of Labor annual convention.

Delegates passed a resolution opposing any attempt to bring in right-to-work laws, which "do not guarantee the right of every worker to a job, but instead attack the trade union movement and undermine the standard of living of all working people."

Stoney said the right-to-work laws would amount to "the right to work for less, the right to go and scab if there is a strike."

A vote on future federation policy, schedule Tuesday, was postponed until today. Delegates are being asked to choose between a hard-line policy recommended by the executive and a more moderate line aimed at improving labor's image in the province.

Observers see today's vote as an indicator of Friday's balloting when delegates will choose a secretary-treasurer between Art Kube, regional education officer of the Canadian Labor Congress and a moderate, and incumbent Len Guy.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett, meanwhile, urged trade unionists "to give up one week's beer money and join the NDP."

He told delegates that the labor movement as a whole and the New Democratic Party have always had differences "and we will continue to have those differences because the trade union movement and the party are not one and the same."

Barrett, former premier of B.C., said the NDP values the official affiliation of trade unions with his party but he also urged union members to join the party on an individual basis as full-fledged members.

"We need ideas and we need some changes in policy."

There were no recriminations in Barrett's speech to the federation, although some labor leaders said the executive council's hard-nosed criticism of the NDP when it was in power contributed to that party's defeat.

THOUSANDS MARCH IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Twenty-thousand trade unionists and Labor party workers marched up to the gates of Parliament tonight demanding that the Labor government avoid making cuts in public spending.

Police stood shoulder-to-shoulder outside Parliament as the demonstrators, led by nine left-wing Labor members of Parliament, came to a halt.

The demonstration was in opposition to the government's policy aimed at strengthening the pound.

Blacks Back Down

GENEVA (UPI) — Militant Rhodesian black nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo backed down today and said they are prepared to start talking now, with Britian about the formation of a pre-independence interim government.

The two, partners in a "Patriotic Front," had previously refused to discuss any other issue unless Ivor Richard, British chairman of the Rhodesian peace talks, set a definitive and binding date for Rhodesia's independence under black majority rule.

"We are now studying the British proposals for the shape of the interim government and are awaiting for the chairman to arrange bilateral talks with us on the subject," a Patriotic Front spokesman said.

Richard had refused to set any firm date, arguing that this would depend on how long it will take to complete the legal and constitutional steps involved in the independence process.

Meanwhile, U.S. intelligence sources reported the Soviet Union is increasing military aid to Rhodesian guerrillas.

Sources say a Russian ship unloaded 18 heavily-armed armored vehicles and ammunition in Tanzania in recent days.

The Sky Didn't Fall, Levesque Soothes

Times News Services

MONTREAL — "Many people realized this morning . . . that the sky has not fallen on our heads," Premier-elect Rene Levesque said Tuesday night, continuing to dispel fears about the consequences of his Parti Quebecois' overwhelming victory in the Quebec election.

See other Quebec stories, Page 9.

Reiterating his party's promise to hold a referendum within two years on the question of Quebec independence, Levesque said it was necessary to have a consensus on the question.

"If we don't have this consensus, we must respect the fact that we don't have it," he said in an interview on CBC's French-language television network.

"There is no possible ambiguity, it is a commitment and we will stick to it."

The PQ won 69 of 110 seat in the election, something Mr. Levesque described as a miracle since he expected to win a maximum of 40 ridings.

Levesque earlier said he expects to take over as Quebec premier in about 10 to 15 days and has placed priority on putting the province's financial and administrative situation on a sound basis.

Levesque told a news conference that he and Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa would meet Thursday to fix a date for change of government.

Levesque said he had had contacts with officials of the finance department, Hydro-Quebec and the Quebec Deposit and Investment Fund to discuss the province's capabilities.

INSURE NOW FOR DIVORCE?

WASHINGTON (WP) — A New York divorce lawyer says the time has come when married couples should take out divorce insurance the way they insure against fire, auto accidents and sickness.

The lawyer, Diana DuBroff, made the recommendation after seeing divorce rates soar and dealing with suffering parents and needy children in divorce cases.

"The broken home is as American as apple pie and motherhood," she wrote in the fall issue of The Barrister, a magazine published by the young lawyers section of the American Bar Association. "And those who suffer most are the children."

DuBroff's proposal, in which she calls a family security guarantee plan, would be designed chiefly to provide temporary child support — no more than one or two years' worth — giving the partners in the broken marriage a breathing period at a time of economic as well as emotional strain.

Such financial cushion, she said, "could insure our children from becoming public charges, save our employable divorcees from hasty remarriages and keep our middle-income marriage casualties from the poverty rolls.

"Further, it could protect our guilt-ridden fathers from avoiding the children because of delinquent payments. It could eliminate the family court support and non-support hostilities . . . It could even help the father who gets custody of the children and must provide household care while he works."

She raised the question of whether divorce insurance all paying for the children of divorce" as it is, she said, as society picks up the tab for deadbeat fathers.

Would it encourage divorce? When health insurance began, some believed that it was inviting illness, she said.

Is such insurance marketable? "Actuarial studies have not yet been completed that could tell how much divorce insurance would actually cost," she conceded, so nobody knows. "It's now up to the actuaries, the insurance executives, the bankers and the far-sighted lawyers . . . to press for a workable plan."

BITE WORSE THAN BARK

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — What would you do if your father-in-law said the main course was lamb, then told you after dinner it was dog?

What 26-year-old Amaro Maturano did, said the government news agency Telam, was threated to kill everybody in the house and proceed to strangle 40 chickens, cut the throats of three mules and three cows, shoot six more mules dead, break 1,200 eggs ready for market and set the farmhouse and truck on fire.

Big Firm May Quit Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of Canada's largest telecommunications equipment manufacturer says his company may shift a major portion of its operations to the United States unless the business climate is improved here.

Robert Scrivener, chairman of Northern Telecom Ltd. — formerly Northern Electric — told the Senate foreign affairs committe Tuesday that lower labor costs, higher productivity and better support for costly research and development all serve to beckon the company across the border.

Northern Telecom is a subsidiary of the major supplier of equipment to Bell Canada. Bell Canada, through its subsidiaries, has a monopoly on more than two of every three telephones in Canada.

He told the committee that Northern Telecom is beginning to market highly-sophisticated digital switching equipment and to recover the more than $100 million invested in development costs, sales would have to be made beyond the Canadian market, now about 80 per cent of its $1 billion annual sales.

"When this new equipment gets in the marketplace, price is likely to be the final determinant in the decision to buy," he said. All excess manufacturing costs had to be trimmed and this would be difficult in Canada.

He conceded that the output per worker in Canada was good but said that higher equipment and capital costs and the high costs of new technology resulted in lower productivity rates.

The best way to lower this high cost of technology would be by providing more incentives for research and development.

He suggested these incentives should not take the form of outright grants, but should be tied to the tax system.

AFTER THE HUNT, THE HUNT BEGAN

Two men were to appear in provincial court today charged with theft after a Duncan hunter turned detective to recover his stolen game — a 230-pound deer carcass.

Colwood RCMP said Randy Neilson had been hunting in the B.C. interior and left the game on the roof rack of his car while he visited friends at Langford.

When he left to drive home the deer had gone, annoying Neilson to the point where he began an independent search.

Police said he located the deer in the back of a truck parked at a beer parlor, and identified it by means of a missing tooth.

The tooth had been removed by a game warden during a spot check for animal health at Cache Creek.

Gulf Islands Are Going to Canadians

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Nelson Paul Whittier and Joachim Fuerst Zu Furstenberg have much in common, although they live poles apart.

Both are extremely wealthy, highly successful businessmen. Whittier lives in Los Angeles. Furstenberg lives in Donaueschingen, West Germany.

Each also used to own an island in the lower part of the Gulf chain.

Whittier owned Goudge Island, a 36-acre paradise opposite Canoe Cove in North Saanich, while Furstenberg owned the 1,440-acre Moresby Island, the large island B.C. Ferries travellers see on the starboard side as ferries leave Swartz Bay.

Over the past 18 months both have sold their holdings to the same company, Chesham Investments Ltd., a firm incorporated in Calgary on Jan. 6, 1975, and listing among its principal offers J. Douglas Robinson and John Ellison, both of Bermuda.

Chesham has agreed to pay Furstenberg $1,212,500 in yearly instalments of $404,166, and Whittier $950,000 in yearly instalments of $144,043.

What's significant about the two deals is not only the amount of money involved but that the purchaser is a Canadian family.

John Yuil of the Vancouver real estate firm of MacCaulay, Nicolls and Maitland, who handled the sales, refers to the family as "one of Canada's wealthiest." He says Robinson and Ellison are more or less front men.

Yuil refuses to identify the family.

"They're super sensitive about publicity," he says. "They have a daughter attending school in eastern Canada and they are afraid if their name gets into print they may be subject to a kidnap attempt."

The purchase of the two islands is especially note-

'I Kicked Him Up, Hit Him in Mouth'

An ex-wrestler roughed up a holdup man, grabbed his rifle and spoiled the escape of the bandit and a companion during a robbery late Tuesday at the 25-Hour Chevron Service at the Trans-Canada and Tillicum Road.

"I told him, 'You're not going to get away with that,'" said Regent St. Jean, 47, one of two attendants working at the station.

The robbers were set to drive away, but when St. Jean interfered, they fled on foot and were arrested by Saanich police shortly after.

Ross B. Elworthy, 21, of 1683 Foul Bay, and Edwin H. Wilkinson, 22, of 513 Ardersier, were remanded without plea to Thursday when they appeared in provincial court today.

They are charged with armed robbery and possession of offensive weapons.

St. Jean, formerly of Montreal, said it was the second time he has successfully disarmed a holdup man. He agreed it was a dangerous thing to do, especially when the service station robber looked like a bigger man.

"I had no choice. I thought he might be going to shoot us anyway, so I kicked him and hit him in the mouth. It happened so fast, I just grabbed the gun."

St. Jean, who weighs 157 pounds, was at the gas pumps when one of the robbers walked into the office with the rifle.

David Murdoch, of Sooke, was on duty and St. Jean saw through the window that the man had a gun on him. Murdoch had taken all the bills from the till when ordered by the gunman: "Give me money, give me money."

When the rifleman emerged from the office, St. Jean went into action, kneed the man and took the rifle.

The robber started for a car and shouted to an accomplice who was waiting there.

"He yelled at the other one, 'Use your gun,'" St. Jean said.

When the bandits ignored St. Jean's order to stand still, he fired the gun.

The two men then ran off.

Police found a second rifle in the abandoned car. They also recovered a sum of money but did not disclose the amount.

Murdoch said when the rifleman came into the office, he thought the man was a hunter because of the gun and the way he was dressed.

St. Jean said he was held up eight years ago in the street outside a Montreal club by a man with a pistol.

The man wanted his car, but St. Jean caught the man off guard, struck him and took the gun.

OK Given Heart Unit Expansion

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland today approved expansion of Royal Jubilee Hospital's open heart surgery unit so it can do six instead of four of the intricate operations a week.

The work, to cost about $50,000 and take about three months, will ease the lengthy waiting list at the only unit of its kind on Vancouver Island. At present Jubilee is booking open heart surgery into next May.

The Unit now does four operations each week and frequently five when emergency situations arise. Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said today he expects that when the expansion is completed, emergency situations will mean there are sometimes seven operations a week.

Open heart surgery involves sophisticated work on the heart at rest using a heart-lung machine. Teams of up to 12 replace faulty valves, repair other other major heart defects and install tiny bypass veins around clogged heart arteries.

The addition involves expansion of post-operative care facilities for the most part. Open heart patients require intensive care in the first few days after their surgery and lack of these has limited the number of operations.

The hospital asked provincial approval for the expansion in a brief seven months ago and during the summer some patients awaiting surgery wrote expressing worry over the delay. They were waiting up to three months then, depending on the urgency of their case.

Now, That's A Hot Line!

Telephone users often burn up the wires but rarely consume the whole instrument, as happened Tuesday.

Mrs. G. R. Arnold, 2515 Prior, called Victoria firemen — on another line —to say there were sparks coming from her phone.

Deputy chief Mike Belton said when firemen arrived they found the phone destroyed by the fire and damage to a desk and some nearby magazines and curtains.

Belton could offer no explanation. "I've never heard of such a thing," he said.

Fonzies: 'Sit on It' They All Say

Neighbors claim a dining lounge on Cordova Bay Road is being "run as a joint", with the two partners "pushing booze" instead of food.

They also allege policemen investigating complaints have glossed over the facts because they're friendly with the owners.

Today, Gary Kelly, who with Dan Koller operates the Duke's Dining Lounge at 4558 Cordova Bay, commonly known as Fonzies, denied both charges.

They were made earlier this week when a delegation, led by Don Ray of 4566 Cordova Bay Road, asked Saanich council for action.

Their complaints will be investigated by council's liquor review committee. Council will then decide before the end of the year whether or not to ask the Liquor Control Board to revoke Kelly and Koller's licence.

"That is not an eating place," Ray told council, "I've watched families go in there and promptly come out. They're not selling food, they're pushing booze."

Ald. David Paterson backed up Ray's claim and said all members of council should "go there to see what's going on".

"I know what's going on there," he said, "It's supposed to be a family restaurant but you can go there and drink all night and listen to the music. Later on, you'll get a plate of food . . . compliments of the house."

"That's a crock of beans, the guy's just trying to get his name in the paper," Kelly retorted, "We've never given food away."

Kelly said Fonzies used to serve prawns and French fries for $1.50 but the liquor board said this was not enough. In August the menu was changed to include, for the same price, a smorgasbord of salads, chow mein and chili.

Chief Bob Peterson also contradicted Ray's claim that police officers investigating 25 complaints, had been lenient in their reporting because of friendship with Kelly and Koller.

"I don't agree with that kind of comment, that the report was slanted," Peterson said, "When you've got 106 persons in this department it would be impossible to pick only friendly ones to carry out the operations."

Peterson said it is up to council to set the guidelines, as far as a business licence is concerned, and the liquor board, in regard to the liquor permit.

Ray, who operates the Canterbury and Coachman Inns, said the noise from Fonzies is so bad that he has had to change his lifestyle.

"I'm unable to sleep before 2 a.m. and, when I have important meetings, I have to sleep downtown at a motel. On Sunday at 3 a.m. it was still going on."

Kelly denied the claims.

"I left at 10 to 12", he said, adding the last customer had left 25 minutes before that.

He, too, said, Fonzies received no special treatment from the Saanich police.

"They used to harass us like crazy," he said. He said this had stopped because the noise had been toned down and a commissionaire hired.

Kelly said neither Ray nor any of the other residents have lodged complaints with him or Koller.

Ask The Times

Q. Will you please clarify something for me in connection with the size of Beacon Hill Park? On the stone plaque up by the flag pole it states that the park comprises 154 acres. On the story printed on the notice board at the end of Goodacre Lake it says 184 acres. On the map over by the deer pen it says 154 acres, while right alongside it, where the history of the park is described, it states it comprises 184 acres. In the interest of accuracy it would be interesting to know just which acreage is correct. W.B.H.

A. The actual total acreage of the park is 184.4 acres, according to the city's parks department. The variance in the two figures posted in the park is due to the acreage of roads within the park not being included in the lesser figure, that is, 154 acres.

Police Seek Witnesses

Saanich police are appealing for witnesses who saw a 1968 Plymouth sedan shortly before it crashed in the 580-block West Saanich Road early Tuesday.

Its driver, Lyle Bruce Dobbyn, 36, of 1731 Cedar Ave., remains in poor condition with head and chest injuries at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He was found unconcious and pinned behind the wheel of the car in a ditch after it struck a tree.

Nearby residents apparently did not hear the crash and the accident was not discovered until a passerby noticed the car and woke up a resident about 2:20 a.m.

Classy Wharf Costly Place

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The cost of boat moorage has hit $2 per lineal foot per month.

And, for that price, you get water supplied but no power.

The moorage is in front of Hartwig Court on Wharf Street in the Inner Harbor and is being advertised by Trevor Davis of Hans Hartwig's company, Diversified Holdings Ltd.

Why so high, when moorage at such places as Oak Bay Marina is available at 95 cents per foot per month under a yearly contract and $1.50 per month on a monthly basis?

"It's an exclusive spot," Davis says, "We don't want old boats. We want newer boats, preferably 50-footers."

He says high taxes forced the peak rate.

"The foreshore leases cost so much and the taxes on our parking lot alone would choke a horse," he said.

At least one marina operator feels Diversified Holdings is justified in charging $2 per foot on a monthly basis.

A spokesman for Bosun's Marina Ltd. in North Saanich says, "If you can get moorage in Vancouver for $2.50 a foot you're extremely lucky The rates have not gone up in proportion with the costs."

He said wharfage rates must be increased some time in the near future or marinas will be forced out of business.

Bosun's Marina charges $1.15 per foot on a yearly basis.

"We will be forced to increase our fees or take out our floats so that houses can be built on it (the property) and say to heck with it."

Westport Marina is another marina that now supplies moorage on a yearly basis only, setting a fee of $1 per foot with the year beginning April 1 and ending March 31. Van-Isle Marina's year starts Aug. 1 and the annual fee is $1.20 per foot per month.

The West Bay Marina in Esquimalt is the closest to Diversified Holdings' project and charges a rate of $1.15 per month but moorage is at a premium.

More and more Vancouver and Seattle boats are being moored at marinas and yacht club basins in this area as moorage, even at much higher prices, becomes more scarce in their vicinities.

Cranston: Much more than just a magnificent skater

Home Dropped From Heritage Designation

After successfully defending a court challenge which sought to overthrow the demolition freeze on a heritage home, Victoria city council decided Tuesday that the building — at 1040-1042 Linden — isn't worth saving after all.

It was one of 77 residential buildings included in council's emergency bylaw passed last July. The owners of the property, developers Krieger Stricker Co. Ltd., who planned to demolish it for a condominium project, contested the validity of the bylaw but a B.C. Supreme Court ruling found in the city's favor.

The firm had pointed out that a demolition permit had already been approved by City Hall before the emergency bylaw took effect.

During a council tour Monday of some of the homes on the list, now proposed for heritage designation, developer George Stricker told aldermen that failure to complete the project was costing the firm $300,000.

After inspecting the building several council members said they were convinced it was not worth preserving.

In other business at its caucus session Tuesday, council gave approval in principle to a proposal which it hopes will give some assurance that heritage homes, once designated, will be preserved.

Under the program, owners of such homes could apply to a city-established heritage improvement fund for grants to repaire and maintain their buildings. The grants would be equal to their annual gross property taxes.

Full taxes would be payable as usual, and the program would be financed from the city's general revenues. Estimated cost of administering the fund next year is $50,000 to $55,000.

Meanwhile, council was reminded that the emergency bylaw protecting the list of 70-plus homes runs out Dec. 31, by which time all individual heritage designation bylaws may not have been fully processed and received provincial cabinet approval.

As a form of legal insurance, aldermen agreed it would be sensible to extend the emergency bylaw — probably by at least a three-month period.

In addition to the Krieger Stricker property, council struck off 13 other homes from the list proposed for designation.

'Inhibition Is a Very Deadly Enemy,' Says Toller

max low

Sitting and talking with Toller Cranston as he languishes on an elegant sofa in the Olde England Inn somehow is like being in another world.

He is dressed in a stark suit of black corded-velvet and around his waist is a wide belt with large brass buckles. A huge fur coat is draped across a gigantic canopied four-poster bed.

Yet it is not the clothes. Nor the surroundings.

It is Toler himself.

It is this young Canadian who has set the world alight with his skating; who seems to have everything yet wants more, demands more; who is not satisfied even with the best; who is so different and seems to come from somewhere far off . . .

But as you talk you know he doesn't intend it to be that way. He has been hailed wherever he has appeared as a magnificent athlete, a magnetic showman and as the most controversial figure in the skating world today.

"I think, eccentricity and controversy are things that, if one is aware of them, are invalid," Toller says simply. "I don't feel I'm eccentric or controversial. I feel that what I've learned is that inhibition is a very deadly enemy to everyone.

"People who cultivate eccentricity are never really eccentric. You can only be what you think you are. So this is someone else's opinion of me —not my own."

Toller smiles a wry kind of smile.

"I try not to read my own press because someone once told me, and I think it's true, that if you ever start to believe what people say of you then it's the beginning of the end. You must never think of yourself as being what other people think of you. You must think of you being you."

But what is he? What is this man who after 20 years of competition and countless medals has turned professional and, after spurning the existing shows, has set off to tour North America with his own company (it will be at Memorial Arena tonight and Thursday night) calling itself simply The Ice Show?

He is an artist, on and off the ice. A painter, a writer. But never just a skater.

His art work has won him acclaim. His first book "Toller" which wasn't about skating but told in a artistic way what it is like to perform, was 35 weeks on the best-seller list. His second book "A Ram on the Rampage" which is about the adventures of Super Ram and is a spoof on the odiac sign Aries, will be out in a couple of weeks. And already he is working on this third book "The Strawberry Planet" which he hopes people of all ages will be able to relate to.

Yet Toller Cranston doesn't regard himself as a writer.

"Then, I don't regard myself as a dancer, either, yet I've always tried to dance on the ice," he points out with a smile. "I've always tried to be myself. Writing is very easy if you just write like you talk."

And he is not a man who has become embittered because he didn't win an Olympic gold medal.

"Many people ask me that, but for me that never existed," he says and you believe him. "I'm happy with what I have. I never regarded it as a definitive measuring stick, I've never felt that way about figure-skating that winning was the whole answer.

"It's not that I didn't want to win. I did. Of course I did. And I tried as hard as I could. But because I didn't win, I don't have a cross to bear for the rest of my life. I haven't even begun yet. Your whole life, your whole approach to things, cannot be judged in five minutes. The real judges are the audiences of the world—they seem to know."

But is he the greatest, this man who has so often been called the "Nureyev of the ice" and the "skater of the century"? He was Canadian senior champion for six years in a row. Three times he was judged the world's top free-skater. Is he the best?

"It's not important if you're the best," he says with sincerity. "Why must we always classify everyone? Do we have to know who's the best? We don't compare artists. You must just go out and perform."

And to Toller Cranston, that is everything.

"Turning professional hasn't changed my skating, except perhaps to give me more freedom because it is my show," he explains. "But I don't think that money has anything to do with how you perform on the ice. I don't think that changes you. It hasn't changed me.

"I'm enjoying life very much at the moment. I can buy anything I want and my taste leans toward the exotic and the very bizarre. Yet I can lead the simplest life and be happy. The only important thing is my work. It's the only thing that makes sense to me. It's the only thing that hasn't disappointed me. People, relationships, lifestyles, are very flexible but your work is the one constant thing. So life is becoming very simplistic to me in a way. I need light and peace to create and really it's a supreme soure of pleasure for me to do that."

Toller admits to being a perfectionist and a hard worker and to expecting so much from his cast that "even the best isn't good enough."

And now, what can be better? What else can there be for this man who at only 27 has already achieved so much?

"If I had a wish, it would be to be allowed to go to the limit in the things that interest me," he confides "I know that I have an ability to act and I want to make skating a lauching pad to other careers. I never want to be put in a niche. I don't want to be known as the skater."

"I want to be me . . ."

Publicity Gets the Bills Paid

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Every day, a tiny band of men roams the streets, striking fear in the hearts of Argentines.

They are not political terrorists, but employees of one of the oldest bill collection agencies anywhere.

The agency, dreamed up by a couple of businessmen fed up with clients who welched on their payments for new cars, sends out teams of collectors outfitted in top hats and tails. They carry black briefcases with the words "overdue debt," painted on the sides in glaring red paint.

Each two-man team attracts a large crowd of curious spectators eager to know who owes money, which is exactly what the agency wants.

Adolfo Cabello, one of the founders of The Gentlemen, as the agency is known, says the success rate of the elegantly-dressed bill collectors is nearly 100 per cent.

He had patented the idea here as a "system for the collection of overdue debts based on publicity, psychology and elegance, and says he is dickering with interested parties in other Latin American countries and in the United States who want franchises.

"People who owe money are usually so anxious to get rid of our employees and the crowds following them that they often pay up the same day," he told a visitor at the agency's cluttered downtown Buenos Aires office.

"The secret of our success is that we have incorporated into the collection of bills the main ingredient of selling: publicity."

Business is so good that the agency handles only certain cases. One of its major clients is a large U.S. airline with offices here. Almost daily, the agency receives computerized printouts of customers who have bounced cheques for air tickets, or who have fallen behind in credit payments.

"We try to handle only those cases where people who have the money, or should have it, try to get out of paying their debts. For example, we have vacationers who fly on credit all over the world and get amnesia about their bills when they return home."

The top-hatted collectors usually step in when normal measures, such as phone calls and polite letters, have failed.

The agency collects a commission on the debt, up to a maximum of 25 per cent. A polite note is sent to the debtor asking payment within three days. If not, the missive says, "our personnel will be mobilized."

The agency has a staff of 14 collectors. They are trained never to crack a smile or engage in conversation with spectators or the target. A simple card is handed over asking the debtor to visit the collection agency office immediately and settle accounts.

Cabello recalls that a Buenos Aires lawyer who received a visit from The Gentlemen because of a bad cheque had to move his office to another building because other tenants accosted him in the elevator every day laughing and shouting: "Pay up! Pay up!"

200,000 a Year Get Housing

By GRAHAM FARNSHAW

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The Hong Kong government is drastically expanding its public housing program to provide new homes for over 200,000 people every year by the early 1980s.

Already almost half of the 4.5 million people in this British colony live in subsidized apartments built by the government's housing authority and housing officials expect that by 1984 at least 65 per cent of the population will be living in public housing.

Despite concentrated building efforts over the last 20 years, there are still nearly 300,000 squatters in Hong Kong, living for the most part in squalid wooden huts on hillsides around the built-up areas.

Another 100,000 people live on rooftops or in derelict old boats moored in typhoon shelters.

Housing officials say there are 95,000 families on the housing authority's waiting list and those near the bottom will have to wait between six and 10 years before being offered an apartment.

Hong Kong's governor, Sir Murray Maclehouse, told the colony's appointed legislative council recently that the back of the housing problem should be broken by 1984.

In the present financial year, the housing authority expects to complete new homes for about 109,000 people, but the yearly total is expected to rise to 224,000 by 1980.

Achieving the government's target will cost about $1.2 billion at today's prices and may take 10 years to reach, a housing official said.

The government plans to spend about $600 million on building public housing during the next five years.

The government's involvement in public housing dates from Christmas day, 1953, when a fire in a densely populated squatter area left more than 50,000 people homeless.

The housing authority was founded the following year to find accommodation for the tens of thousands of refugees who flooded into Hong Kong after the end of the Second World War, and between 1954 and 1965 simple seven-storey buildings were built at a rate of 10,000 apartments a year.

Today, these housing projects still house about half a million people but the housing authority concedes that conditions there are unacceptable.

Overcrowding is severe. A large proportion of persons in the old projects live in severe densities with only 20 square feet per person or less, and only one toilet for every 50 families.

Rents, however, are low. Most of the tenants in the old projects pay only about $5 a month.

In the more modern projects, crowding is less of a problem and rents are higher, but the government says that even in the most modern of the projects, rents are about half those of comparable accommodation in the private sector.

Urban councillor Elsie Elliott, who is also a member of the housing authority, is the colony's most vocal critic of the government's policy on housing.

"Firstly, there's not enough of it; secondly, half of what we have is overcrowded and thirdly, the new housing we are building is far too expensive for the workers," she

Mrs. Elliott said public housing rents are double what they should be.

The housing authority has announced a rent increase for all its tenants as from Dec. 1.

The housing authority is one of the world's biggest landlords, providing homes for 1.8 million people in 56 housing projects, the largest of which houses 146,000 people.

Novelist Honored

PARIS (Reuter) — France's most coveted literary prize, the Prix Goncourt, was awarded Monday to high school teacher Patrick Grainville, 29, for his novel Les Flamboyants (The Coral Trees). The prize is 50 francs —less than $10 U.S. But the publicity that surrounds it ensures the winning author sales of at least 300,000 francs ($70,000) and pride of place in the French literary world.

3 DAYS ONLY
LEATHER SALE

We're tough buyers when it comes to leathers. We buy only soft leathers that caress the body with ease and comfort. Our styling is obviously European and includes short waist blousson styles, two pocket shirt styles, ¾ length four pocket styles; and top coats as well. Our leather labels read Cortefiel of Spain, Beged Or of Israel and Tonino of Italy . . . oh yes, we're a soft touch, in leathers.

Home Auto Repairs Seen Declining

Times News Services

TORONTO — Discount stores and mass merchandisers face a decline in their share of the $13-billion auto repair market, according to Nathan Starr, executive vice-president of Acklands Limited, Canada's largest auto parts wholesaler.

"Major retailers have expanded sucessfully in recent years by offering discount prices on auto parts and providing large-scale repair facilities. But the trend is now heading the other way — back to the independent garage and service station," Starr said Wednesday in a speech to Acklands' annual convention of suppliers and customers.

In the past 20 years, mass merchandisers have expanded their share of retail auto parts sale from 11 to 20 per cent. Service stations and garages have declined from 41 to 31 per cent of the market during the same period.

"As auto technology becomes more complx, the consumer won't be able to replace major parts as easily as he now does. Space-age technology is going to bring repair work back to the professional.

UN Bid Renewed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Angola has renewed its application for UN membership, which was blocked last June by a U.S. veto. In a letter dated Monday to the president of the Security Council, the ambassadors of Benin (Dahomey), Libya and Tanzania asked for an urgent meeting to consider the application.

Merrill Lynch looks at the economic future

The ballots are in, and soon the political and economic ideology of a new U.S. administration will face the tests of reality. What will this mean for investors, business and the market?

The best minds at Merrill Lynch's New York research division, including the chief investment strategist, top economist, and senior market analyst, have assembled a comprehensive post-election report that deals in detail with these important issues. This report is now available in Canada through Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities.

The report addresses itself to the questions on every serious investor's mind, and includes an analysis of economic and market reaction to past presidential elections. How is the market likely to react? What changes can be expected in industrial production, GNP, taxes, corporate profits and employment? What about inflation and interest rates? Which industries are apt to benefit most?

Find out for yourself. Mail this coupon today for your free six-page booklet. It's time to start looking ahead.

Interest payable April 1 and October 1
Four months' interest payable April 1, 1977
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $400 million of the new bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $400 million of Government of Canada 7% bonds maturing December 1, 1976 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 9½% bonds due October 1, 2001 are an addition to $300 million of 9½% bonds due October 1, 2001 and dated October 1, 1976 and will be eligible beginning January 1, 1977 for purchase by the Purchase Fund created October 1, 1976.

The new bonds will be dated December 1, 1976 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on December 1, 1976 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Canex-Placer

Placer Development Ltd. says its wholly-owned subsidiary, Canex Placer Ltd., will make an offer to purchase for cash all the issued shares of Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. of Calgary at $6.15 a share. The offer will be conditional on the tender of not less than 51 per cent of the issued shares by a date to be specified in the offer. The offer may be terminated if this condition is not met, Placer said in a news release. The Canex-Placer offer is .35 higher than the offer announced previously by Home Oil Co. Ltd.

Greyhound Lines

Greyhound Lines of Canada Ltd. has reported increased revenues for the first nine-months of 1976. Consolidated net income amounted to $7,215,964 which was equal to $1.54 per share. For the same period in 1975, net income was $7,095,805 or $1.52 per share. The increases in consolidated net income for Jan. to Sept. 30 resulted from increased revenues, which were $84,287,975 in 1976, compared with $71,676,006 in 1975. Revenues for the third quarter of 1976, July 6 to Sept. 30, were down slightly at $27,655,327 compared with $28,507,749 in 1975. This resulted in a slight decrease in consolidated net income of $3,202,585, equal to 68 cents per share, compared with $3,372,539 or 72 cents per share in 1975.
